Academy May Drop Football

Fulbright Seeks A Complete Probe Of College Sports Before Resumption

A later Associated Press dispatch quoted a Washington Post story which said 44 of the 90 suspended cadets were members of the academy football squad. The Post's source, whose name was withheld, is reported to be closely associated with West Point.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—(AP)—Senator Fulbright (D-Ark) called today for a suspension of football at West Point, where 90 cadets, including a majority of the football team, were discharged yesterday for cheating in exams.

He said he thought it would be a good idea if football were also suspended at Annapolis, the United States Naval academy, until the whole question of intercollegiate athletics could be studied.

"It's a disgraceful situation," Fulbright told a reporter. "Intercollegiate athletics have become so perverted that it's a corrupting influence on all the youngsters in the big universities."

De-Emphasis Demands Grow

The unexpected housecleaning at the military academy sent demands for a fuller investigation echoing through Congress. Sentiment was hardening in several quarters for a "de-emphasis" of football and possibly other intercollegiate competition at "The Point."

Rep. Potter (R-Mich) said the ousted cadets are victims of a system of athletic commercialism.

"They have been instilled with a philosophy that their main effort should be on the athletic field," he said in a statement. "Academic work, consequently, assumes the status of an extra-curricular activity." Potter said the discharged cadets are typical of many college athletes today.

Practice Nothing New

Senators reported the cheating at West Point began several years ago among football players who found it hard to spend hours on the gridiron and still keep up with their studies.

If Fulbright's suggestion is adopted it would mean the end, at least temporarily, of the colorful Army-Navy football games.

The Arkansas Senator, former president of the University of Arkansas, advocated an examination of the whole field of intercollegiate athletics in the country. He said such a study could be made by the special commission on ethics in government which he wants established. A resolution to set up the commission is being considered by a Senate labor subcommittee.

Potter Defends Cadets

Rep. Potter said he thought the Army dealt with the cadets too harshly.

"Rather than to place all the blame and responsibility on these 90 cadets," he said, "the West Point administration itself has to assume the major responsibility for this unsavory condition."

"An investigation is in order," said Senator Young (D-ND), a member of the congressional board of visitors which inspects the academy each year.

Rep. Doyle (D-Calif), another member of the board, said he thought the Army had made a thorough investigation, but that he was considering recommending that the House armed services committee study the academy's efforts to build winning football teams.

Army has fielded a succession of brilliant teams since the end of World War II.

GOP Seeks Cause Of Trouble

Nine Republican members of the House armed service committee issued a statement saying that instead of a congressional investigation of "moral conditions" at West Point, an inquiry could be more properly "directed at the seat of the malady."

"If the military academy's renounced code of honor were applied to the executive branch of our government, officials would be dismissed in wholesale lots, with White House associates heading the lot," their statement said.

"The American people will not be satisfied by making West Point cadets the scapegoats of a congressional inquiry while the real scoundrels—the appeasers, fellow travelers, influence peddlers, the fixers and the 5 per centers—not only have free rein in Washington but are defended and protected by the White House."

Letter From President On 101st Birthday

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 4—(AP)—Mrs. Belle Hazen Dean celebrated her 101st birthday today with Miss Mary Jane Truman, the President's sister, helping cut the cake.

The cake had 11 candles—one for each decade plus an extra candle for the additional year.

The visit from Miss Truman followed a letter from the President in which he said "to pass the century mark of life is a privilege not vouchsafed to many, and I am happy to join with your friends in extending good wishes to you on your 101 birthday."

Mrs. Dean expressed delight at the celebration. She lives at the Masonic home of Missouri. Miss Truman is worthy grand matron of the Order of the Eastern Star of Missouri.

Fair This Year Bids Strong To Set Records

New Attractions, More Exhibits and Great Races Ahead

Changed, enlarged and renovated until even long-time fairgoers may have to look twice to be certain of where they are, the Missouri State Fair is bidding well to set many records for attendance and entries at Sedalia August 18 through 26.

New entertainment is being provided this year, new breeds and new classes in several other breeds have been added, prize money has been increased in several departments and the improvements made on the grounds have been vast and all-inclusive.

Even the time of the fair has been extended, to nine days instead of eight as in past years as W. E. 'Bill' Preston, the new secretary-manager, has endeavored to give Missourians what he hopes will prove to be "the Midwest's finest fair."

An all-new stage show has been booked for five nights in front of the grandstand. A carnival, so large it has never before been moved westward across the Mississippi river, will occupy the midway with Sally Rand as the featured star. Motorcycle races, not included in the fair's program for years, will be run and a leading circus has been announced for one night.

Races Big Attraction

The Grand Circuit harness races will again be the big attraction and both big cars and stock cars will take their turns at providing thrills on the fair's half mile tracks.

A new bleacher has been erected just north of the grandstand and many hundred additional seats have been built on the grandstand itself. These will provide seats for several thousand more than ever before for all the stage and track events.

Many of the buildings have been repainted this year, new toilets have been erected and all the others have been put in top condition. A new bandstand has been built, the state highway department's "highway gardens" has had a new entrance constructed and the state conservation commission has built a concrete casting pool where agents will teach fly and bait casting all during the week. New lights have been installed on many parts of the huge, 276-acre, state-owned layout. An asphalt floor has been built for the tent which houses the overflow swine and sheep from the swine pavilion—which will house about 1800 of the 2200 or more swine and sheep which will be entered.

Exhibits Be Increased

Early entries indicate an increase of about one-third in most of the departments of the fair. This is especially true of the agriculture department and the livestock shows. The Grand Circuit races are attracting as many if

GI Spends Six Years Trying To Locate Man Who Loaned Him $150

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 4—(AP)—A $150 debt made six years ago hangs heavy over the head of Jason Moore, 21-year-old former Air Force sergeant.

"I just can't rest until all my debts are paid," Moore said. "It's the only one I owe."

The bad thing is that Moore can't find the man he owes the money. He's been looking for him six years.

Moore related that a fellow airman Floyd F. Parks loaned him the money at Pratt Field, Kas., with the promise to be paid back at the end of the month.

The next day Parks was transferred to England or the Aleutians and that is the last Moore has heard or seen of him.

Moore said as far as he knows Parks was an orphan who lived in Illinois with an aunt. He is said to have a sister living in Tennessee but she has not heard from him in several years.

Kem For Curb On Foreign Aid

Would Bar It To Nations Sending War Goods To Reds

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—(AP)—Senator Kem (R-Mo) announced today he will introduce iron-clad legislation ordering President Truman to cut off all military and economic aid to any nation selling war materials to Communists.

He said Great Britain and other Marshall plan countries "are now engaged in selling large quantities of strategic war materials to the Reds" and yet receive U. S. military and economic benefits.

Kem told a reporter he will offer his measure in the Senate next week as an amendment to the $8,500,000,000 foreign aid bill.

He is the author of the so-called Kem amendment, passed by Congress as a rider to an appropriation bill in May. It called for cutting off financial or economic aid for any nation found selling military goods to Soviet Russia or her satellites, while this country was engaged in hostilities.

President Truman sharply criticized the Kem amendment and later the National Security Council, which the President heads, suspended its operation for 90 days.

This week the administration won House approval of a substitute for the Kem amendment, including broad authority for the President to decide when trade with other nations might be halted after a 90-days notice. Kem regards this as an attempt to weaken the original law.

Closed Door Sessions

The Senate foreign relations and armed services committees are holding closed-door hearings of the multi-billion dollar foreign aid bill.

Kem said he would propose these changes in the anti-Communist trade provision:

1. Knock out authority of the Security Council, headed by the President, to make exceptions.

2. Eliminate a requirement that the United States armed forces be actively engaged in hostilities before it would apply.

3. Apply the cut off to military aid as well as economic aid.

"We have learned from experience that if we are to stop arming the Communists through our allies, Congress must pass an iron-clad, escape-proof law, that is mandatory upon the President," Kem said in a statement. "Two laws with 'built in loopholes' have failed to accomplish their objective."

Since the suspension of the Kem amendment rule June 16, Kem said "more than 5,000 American boys have been killed or wounded in Korea."

"The shipment of strategic war materials — and I don't mean women's bathing suits—to the Reds who killed or wounded those boys has gone on," he added.

Administration officials have opposed a mandatory shut off of aid to nations trading with iron curtain countries for several reasons.

They say that numerous critical and strategic materials, needed to build up the defenses of friendly and allied nations, are obtained through such trade.

Boyle Denies Participation In RFC Loan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—(AP)—Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle, Jr., denied in a formal statement tonight that he had any connection with a $565,000 RFC loan made to a St. Louis printing firm.

Boyle said in a statement issued through the National Committee that while he represented the American Lithofold Corporation for 2½ months in 1949 he had no connection with a loan the company obtained from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in November of that year.

Byrd Puts Truman On Spot

Senator Byrd (D-Va) previously had challenged President Truman to defend Boyle on "influence peddling" charges made against him or get the national chairman fired by his party committee. Byrd said he wants to study Boyle's denial before replying.

Senator Hoey (D-NC) told a reporter Boyle's denial also will be studied later by a Senate expenditures subcommittee. He said the subcommittee had gathered "preliminary information" about what Senator William (R-Del) told the Senate were "vigorous efforts" by James P. Finnegan, former St. Louis collector of internal revenue, to get approval of the $565,000 RFC loan for American Lithofold.

Williams said Finnegan, now under investigation by a St. Louis grand jury, is a close friend and associate of Boyle.

Boyle said in his statement that he was engaged by American Lithofold in February, 1949, as counsel at a monthly retainer of $500.

Retainer For Legal Service

"The retainer was for general legal services and had nothing to do with the company's application for an RFC loan," Boyle said. "I had nothing to do with the preparation of the application. I had nothing to do with the presentation of the case. I never discussed the loan with anyone in the RFC. In short, I had nothing to do with the granting of the loan.

"At that time I was engaged in the active practive of law, and if I had represented this company before the RFC, it would have been entirely proper and ethical. But the fact is that I did not."

Boyle said he "completely severed" his connections with American Lithofold in April of 1949, when he became executive vice president of the Democratic National Committee. He is paid $30,000 yearly as chairman.

Asserting that he had suspended all law practice at the time, Boyle said his services as counsel for the company covered a period of 2½ months "and the payments which I received from the company totaled $1,250."

'No Contact Since 1949'

"The last check was received at the end of April, 1949, and since then I have had no connection with the company, nor received any payment from it," he said.

The St. Louis Post-dispatch charged that Boyle had received $8,000 from American Lithofold. It quoted a company official as saying Boyle never had a chance to give any legal services because he suspended practice when he became a paid official of the national committee.

Close Associates Believe Ike Will Long Debate 1952 Move

(Editor's Note: Preston Groven accompanied Gen. Eisenhower on his January inspection swing around the North Atlantic pact capitals. As chief of the Ap Bureau in Paris, Grover has since watched the defense buildup and its ramifications. He discusses the Eisenhower-for-President pressures in the following dispatch.)

By PRESTON GROVER

PARIS, Aug. 4—(AP)—Persons close to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower believe he will not make up his mind about running for the presidency in 1952 until the very last hour possible.

They believe that if he runs at all it will be only under very special circumstances.

Not in a long time has a man been put under such pressure to declare himself. Close friends, important political figures and high level newspapermen have shot the presidential question at him so often that his assistants at supreme headquarters of the allied forces in Europe (SHAFE) are becoming fearful of making new appointments for him.

Ike Just Stays Quiet

The hard fact is that Eisenhower is saying nothing.

An additional hard fact is that, if Eisenhower were to declare himself a candidate for the presidency at this time, it would rock the 12-nation Atlantic Pact organization to its foundations. In a very large sense, he is the Atlantic Pact so far as Europeans are concerned. He is the one concrete realty. No European, or American, whom I have talked with ever has been able to point to any person, American or other, who could take his place.

At a news conference this week in Washington, President Truman said the general's duties in Europe would permit him to return to the United States to become a candidate in 1952 if he was in that frame of mind.

Eisenhower's associates insist they have seen nothing and heard nothing to indicate he is in that frame of mind—and they rub their luck tokens to ward off any such development.

They share the comment of Bernard Baruch, American financier and adviser to presidents, that to draw Eisenhower into politics would be a "great disservice" to western defense.

He May Act To Protect Pact

What might make Eisenhower seek the presidency, some of his interviewers believe, is discovery that something on the horizon was threatening United States support of the Atlantic Pact. It might be that some isolationist candidate was getting too close to nomination, or that isolationism itself was rising.

Eisenhower doesn't tell this to anyone in any such terms, so far as I can determine. But that is the impact of his talks.

The general has seen both Democratic and Republican figures. If anyone of them has learned whether he would prefer to be a Republican, or a Democrat, it is unknown to his miltary associates.

Ridgway Breaks-Off Korean Truce Talks

Ridgway Move Fulfills Hope Of ROK Heads

By O. H. P. King

TOKYO, Sunday, Aug. 5—(AP)—A source close to leaders in the Republic of Korea government says they want the armistice talks at Kaesong to fail.

The source declined to be identified, explaining that his position was delicate. But he said republic leaders are convinced real peace cannot be achieved by negotiation with the Reds.

Koreans, both in the Red North and in the south, want unity more than peace and the Communists want all of Korea—now or later, he added.

UN Aid A Godsend

He said the republic is grateful for United Nations aid.

"We would have been annihilated if the U.S. and the U.N. had not come to our rescue," he observed. "But they (republic leaders) feel gratitude does not call for a sacrifice of principle. Now is not the time for friends to quarrel about principles.

"Let the Communists bear the blame for failure of the truce attempt, if it fails. We hope it will fail and have reason to believe North Koreans hope so, too. Like us, they want a unified Korea, but unlike us they want it to be Communist.

"Any peace short of a unified Korea is an insecure, temporary peace that will be a mere prelude to another war."

Unity Not On Agenda

Unification of Korea is not on the agenda of the armistice talks at Kaesong. It is a political, not a military issue, and as such probably would be one for settlement in the United Nations after any truce.

The source said South Korean leaders "opposed the Kaesong talks from the start because:

"You can't deal with the Communists. They pin you down to an agreement which you keep and which they have no intention of keeping and violate when it serves their cause."

He added that Korea is important "because, up to now, Communism has moved in and taken over little countries without resistance."

"Korea is the first place the Reds wanted that they could not develop a strong minority within that could take over at a given signal. It is the first time an indignant world has united to oppose such aggression.

"If the Reds get away with it, the free world is lost."

7 Persons Die As Cloudburst Hits Colorado

(By The Associated Press)

Flash floods left seven persons dead or missing in Colorado Saturday, and cool air from Canada spread across nearly two thirds of the United States.

A cloudburst Friday night sent a six-foot wall of water racing down the Big Thompson river in Colorado. Motorists and householders had to scramble for high ground. Some climbed high into trees.

An automobile carrying a Denver family on the Big Thompson road west of Loveland was swept away by the floodwaters. A woman and her three daughters were feared drowned. The girls' father managed to reach high ground.

An aged man drowned eight miles northwest of Fort Collins when flood waters from Buckhorn creek struck his house.

The bodies of two other victims, a man and his wife, were found near the state fish hatchery at Bellevue.

Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway today called-off Korean armistice negotiations with the Communists. The general took this action after the Reds failed to fulfill their promise to keep armed troops from the conference area. Approximately 150 Red soldiers were within 100 yards of the conference house.

Allies Gain Three Miles Near Yonchon

U. S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Sunday, Aug. 5—(AP)—Allied troops struck into Communist lines in Korea Saturday for the third straight day. They gained up to three miles in the sensitive area west of Yonchon.

Yonchon is north of parallel 38 in western Korea.

Allied attackers jumped off in the early hours and smashed ahead until mid-morning. Then Chinese Reds with the aid of artillery firmed their lines and slowed the drive.

The Chinese made their stand in the rugged hills that rise in the broad bend of the Imjin river where it swings from east to north.

On the two previous days, the allies attacked in central and east-central Korea.

Allied warplanes kept up their hammering of Red supply lines and centers.

Despite rain-filled skies Saturday, they flew 560 sorties.

KC Market To Resume Operations Tomorrow

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 4—(AP)—The livestock market, closed by the recent flood, is reopening Monday but will not reach normal operation until September 1, an official said today.

Cliff J. Kaney, president of the Kansas City Livestock Exchange, said a run of 10,000 head of cattle is expected the first week. A normal week's run averages some 40,000 head of cattle alone.

Officials decided at a meeting this week that market sheep and all livestock for feed and rest will not be handled at the present time. The decision said the market will open Sunday night "for receipts of straight bunches of cattle via rail or truck, of not less than 15 head belonging to one owner. The animals should be for sale in one lot. The same restrictions apply to hogs."

Reopening of the market will mark the end of a three-weeks cleanup and rehabilitation effort hailed by Kaney as a "near miracle." The resumption of trading at the market, second largest in the world, will bring considerable relief to the nation's beef shortage, he said.

Red Troops In Kaesong Cause Action

TOKYO, Sunday, Aug. 5—(AP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway today broke off Korean truce talks in a stiff message accusing the Reds of "flagrant violations" of their promise to keep armed Communists out of Kaesong.

Ridgway accused the Reds of welshing on their pledge of July 14 to keep the area five miles in radius from the center of Kaesong clear of troops.

He told the Communists the talks would be resumed only if they could give a "satisfactory explanation" of the presence of troops in Kaesong Saturday.

Troops armed with rifles, pistols, grenades, automatic weapons and mortars were seen within 100 yards of the conference house, Ridgway said. He estimated the number as "approximately an infantry company"—about 150.

The supreme allied commander said the U. N. truce team would remain inside its own lines until a "satisfactory explanation of this violation and assurance of non-recurrence are received."

Message Broadcast To Foe

Ridgway's message was broadcast to the Communists by the armed services radio. It was addressed to the Chinese and Red Korean commanders, Gen. Peng Teh-Huai and Gen. Kim Il Sung.

Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy, chief U.N. delegate, followed up Ridgway's demand Sunday morning with a radio telephone message to the chief Red delegate, Lt. Gen. Nam Il.

Joy's message called attention to the Ridgway demand and affirmed that U.N. delegates would remain inside their lines "until further notice."

The message was relayed from the U.N. advance camp near Munsan to Kaesong, site of the peace talks. The Communists acknowledged it.

However, the U.N. truce team was standing by ready to take off for Kaesong by helicopter if the Communist renew their pledge of neutrality for Koesong.

Delegates Keep Ready

Allied delegates and aides went right ahead with staff conferences and similar routine just as though there had been no break in the truce talks. Another meeting had been scheduled for today before Ridgway sent off his message.

The break-off caught both sides deadlocked for the 10th straight day over where to draw a cease-fire buffer zone.

The occupation's civil information and education section said the allies had demanded a buffer line in North Korea between the present battle line and Manchuria.

Peiping radio called any demand for a cease-fire line north of parallel 38 "absurd and arrogant."

Allied leaders have insisted on a line that can be defended. They say parallel 38—the old boundary between North and South Korea—cannot be defended.

Trouble Caused Earlier Delay

Ridgway broke off the talks once before, partly because armed Reds were in and around Kaesong.

Communist trops on July 12 barred 20 war correspondents from traveling to Kaesong with an allied convoy. The entire convoy turned back.

Ridgway then informed the Reds he would not permit a renewal of the talks until they barred Communist troops, excepting police, from the Kaesong area, and agreed to let him choose members of the U.N. truce party including newspapermen.

The Reds agreed.

Post-Dispatch Keeps Boyle Mess Boiling

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 4—(AP)—Democratic National Committee Chairman Wililam M. Boyle, Jr., played an important role in an attempt to gain control of a government-owned nickel plant in Cuba, the Post-Dispatch reported tonight.

Associated with Boyle in the unsuccessful venture, the newspaper said, were James P. Finnegan, then internal revenue collector for St. Louis, Rex Jacobs, Detroit manufacturer, and E. Merl Young of Washington.

The newspaper added the deal fell through when they were unable to interest Shields and Company, a Chicago brokerage firm, in investing $1,000,000 in the project.

Congressmen Become Poll-Parrots In Attacking Voice of America

By Drew Pearson

(Copyright, 1951, By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON. — One of the most interesting aspects of Congress is to see what inspires a speech or who influences a vote. Most of the time the public has no idea what backstage factors are responsible. Frequently not even other members of Congress know.

For instance, a rash of speeches broke out in the House of Representatives the other day attacking the Voice of America and State Department propaganda. In fact, seventeen speeches were made, one after another, bitterly critical of the Voice of America.

The public, of course, had no idea that these speeches were all mimeographed on the same mimeograph machine or largely written by one man and his staff.

Congressmen are supposed to represent the people of the United States and make duly considered speeches which represent their own conviction—not rattle off the canned opinions of ghost writer as if they were phonograph records.

However, copies of the canned mimeograph speeches were sent up to the press gallery, sometimes even before the Congressman began to make the speech on the House floor below. It was like automobiles coming off an assembly line—17 speeches all attacking the Voice of America or Acheson, all delivered by Republicans, and all done on the same mimeograph machine.

The ghost writer who dished out this flow of words obviously was unfamiliar with the poll-parrots who were to mouth them, for he didn't even know how to spell their names. GOP Congressman William "Ayers," and GOP Congressman "Ayeres," and GOP Congressman Karl Stefan of Nebraska he misspelled "Steffan."

An Old Grudge

This backstage business, of course, was known to the Congressmen, though not to the public. But what not even the Congressmen knew was that the man behind all these canned speeches probably would not have had them written had he not been eased out of his job by the man who now heads up the Voice of America.

Assistant Secretary of State Ed Barrett, now in charge of State Department propaganda, was formerly editor of Newsweek magazine, and as such had serious differences with a member of his staff, Robert Humphries.

So much National Association of Manufacturers propanganda began creeping into Newsweek columns through Humphries that Barrett was about to ease him out, when Humphries beat him to it and resigned.

Humphries then took a $25,000 job as chief ghost writer and researcher for the Republican Congressional committee. As such he has a ritzy suite in the George Washington Inn just across from the capitol where a group of writers grind out the speeches for Congressmen who are elected to think for themselves instead of parroting the views of a spite-monger with an axe to grind against his for former boss.

Those are some of the backstage factors the public doesn't always know about when it reads weighty speeches delivered on the floor of Congress or learns of a campaign being waged against the Voice of America.

Making Democracy Work

Some people talk about Communism, others do something about Communism. In the long run, the doers are a lot more important in preventing Communism than the talkers. Here are some people who have gone out and done things rather than just make Senate speeches:

GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS—Mrs. Hiram Cole Houghton, livewire president, and her colleagues have sent radio sets to Iran to help get the Voice of America heard; have organized five and a half million members in foreign countries, thus cementing closer understanding with the U.S.A.; and are inspiring several thousand friendship letters to women abroad.

INTER-AMERICAN CONGRESS OF FREE TRADE UNIONS—This is a group of North American and Latin American unions which are fighting aginst Communism in Latin America. Francisco Aguirre of Cuba, George Meany of the AFL and Jake Potofsky of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers are among its leaders. Most people don't realize it, but Communism has begun to creep in our own front Latin American door, and these labor men are doing a skillful orgnaization job to check it.

ECA's PEN PALS—A lot of individual Americans wonder what they can do about Communism abroad. Here's one small step. The individual touch sometimes counts more than government contacts, and the ECA in Washington has arranged for letters from individual Americans to be sent to individual Europeans, especially from workingmen to workingmen. It's among the labor classes that Communism has made greatest inroads, and letters similar to the "Democracy Letters to Italy" during the Italian elections, help a great deal. A letter sent to "Pen Pals, Washington, D. C.," will be translated and sent to any country you designate, or you can leave the designation up to ECA.

One Senator, George of Georgia, didn't show up for a single vote while billions of dollars were being dished out for post office, treasury, and agriculture departments. George had the excuse that he was writing the nation's tax bill. However, some Senators also think it's important to see how the tax money is being spent . . . Congressman Furcolo of Massachusetts, Democrat, is planning to run against Senator Cabot Lodge, Republican. Lodge may even have trouble inside the Republican party form Sinclair Weeks, the National GOP treasurer, who is thinking of running, too . . . Senator Lyndon Johnson of Texas, who has done such a valuable job of exposing poor military housing, will next crack down on rent gouging around naval and marine bases . . . Price enforcement chief Ed Morgan has ordered his price G-men to make a thorough investigation of the high price of baler twine Black marketeers have been selling baler twine to farmers from trucks at night.

Your New

Social Security

Question: Does a person have to be in need before he can claim social security payments?

Answer: No. This is an insurance program. A retired worker, his wife or widow, and usually minor children, may qualify for benefits without regard to their financial resources, such as savings, property, or other insurance. However, husbands, widowers, parents, and sometimes minor children, are required to establish that they had been dependent for at least half their support on the worker on whose record they claim benefits.

Question: Can a person receive monthly insurance payments if he has earnings from work?

Answer: Beneficiaries aged 75 and over may receive benefits regardless of the amount of their earnings. A beneficiary under that age may receive payments even though he does a limited amount of work. If he works for wages in covered employment, he may earn as much as $50 in a month and still accept his social security check for that month. Beginning January 1, 1951, benefits are not payable for one or more months if the beneficiary, while under 75, does substantial work as a self-employed person (whether as sole owner or as partner) in a trade or business which is covered by the law, if his net earnings from such self-employed income average more than $50 per month for the taxable year. The number of checks not payable will depend on the amount of earnings during the year and on the number of months in which he does substantial work as a self-employed person.

When an individual under age 75 works for wages of more than $50 a month, he must notify the nearest social security field office. If he engages in self-employment and expects to have net earnings from his self-employment which may result in a suspension of benefits, he should also notify the nearest social security field office at once.

THE GILA MURDER

• BY JULIUS LONG •

XII

SAM COLTON dropped his automatic. The silhouette moved nearer and Johnnie McAdams stood close behind him. "Turn over the will, Sam."

Sam laughed. "There's no will, Johnnie. I knew you'd followed me here, so I talked for your benefit just to get you to show your hand to Paul Baker here—the county prosecutor."

McAdams swore, then lifted his hand and brought the gun it contained down on Sam's head. The man dropped in his tracks and lay there. As her father fell, Pat Colton clutched Baker's arm.

McAdams came close to Baker's coupe now, the gun in his hand leveled steadily.

"Sam didn't accomplish much," he said. "But I'm glad I came along to see what he was up to. I never dreamed you'd come here with Pat. I thought you'd have had occasion to reach into the glove compartment by now. Do you know what's in there, Paul? I'll give you one guess. Sure. The mate to the Gila Monster that got poor Laura by the hand. I put it there this evening. I also loosened a valve in one of your tires. I thought it would go flat tonight and you'd need the flashlight in your glove box. I figured the odds were the monster would hang on till you were dead, especially if you had the flat in a deserted place."

"You figured optimistically, Johnnie. Why did you think it necessary to eliminate me?"

"Because you'd guess my motive for killing Laura as soon as you found out about the new will she meant to sign. I visited your office today to convince you that the old will represented Laura's last wishes, You'd never have learned different if you hadn't tricked me with that story about two kids seeing me at Laura's car. I had to tell about the new will then—it was the only story Pat, her brother and her father would believe."

"But it wasn't a will you left in the glove box. It was the Gila Monster."

• • •

McADAMS chuckled. "Sure. You didn't think I was going to kiss a hundred and eighty grand goodby, did you?"

"Why not? That would be chicken feed compared to the bonanza you'd get if you married Pat."

"Me marry Johnnie?" Pat exploded. "Having to date him was the worst ordeal mother ever inflicted on me!"

McAdams laughted bitterly. "I knew the score with Pat. I had to get mine in executor and attorney fees."

"How did you find out about the Gila Monsters, Johnnie?"

"Lawrence brought me out here one time and showed them off."

"Where is he now, Johnnie?"

"Tied up inside. He never knew what hit him. I'm keeping him quiet with chloroform. When he comes to, he'll think his old man conked him. His old man won't be able to deny it because he's going to suicide with his own gun."

"What about Pat and me, Johnnie?"

"You'll both be taken care of when Pat opens the glove box and lets the monster out. If he doesn't kill both of you, it will make you unconscious and more of my chloroform will. I don't think the coroner will be looking for chloroform when he finds the monster'd got to you."

Pat stiffened at Baker's side.

McAdams said: "Open the glove box door, Pat. It won't be pleasant, but if you don't, I'll blow Baker's head off. You wouldn't like that, would you, Pat?"

Baker felt the pressure of Pat's fingers on his wrist.

"I'll have to open it," she said. He waited no longer. With his left hand he lifted the car door catch and lunged against the door. It burst outward, slamming McAdams backward. The gun in his hand went off, but the bullet went high, grazing Baker's head and tearing through the roof. In a continuous movement, Baker went on after the reeling man.

The gun barrel raked his face. He grabbed at it, missed, then concentrated on punches to McAdams' midriff. McAdams wasn't thinking about using the gun then save to ward off the blows. He seemed to realize that in-fighting could do him no good, and he faded back, lifting the gun as he did so. Baker threw himself toward the still inert body of Sam Colton and tried desperately to feel for Sam's gun on the ground. He failed.

The roar and flash of McAdams' gun blinded and deafened him, but he was rolling, and the bullet went wild. Then his hand found Sam Colton's automatic. His fingers grasped it; he lifted and fired at the spot whence the flash had come. He knew he had missed, but the shot had taken the courage out of McAdams. Instead of running to his own car, he jumped under the wheel of Baker's coupe. Baker thought of Pat, and he shouted:

"Get out, Pat! Get out!"

• • •

HE could not see whether she obeyed or not as the coupe was turned about. Then McAdams tried to run over him as he roared away, but he rolled in time and managed to clear the wheels.

"I'm here," Pat's voice called back. He ran to her, found her behind some bushes, where her brother's car was hidden.

"Are you all right? You weren't hit?"

"No. What about Johnnie?"

"He took my car. He must have left his own at the highway. He'll change cars, but he won't get far."

Pat shook her head. "He may not even get to his own car. You see, before I leaped out of your coupe I opened the glove box door. The lizard's loose in it with Johnnie."

As she spoke there was a screeching sound of tires and then the crash of metal as if a car were turning over and over.

Joseph Schanz Works on High Temperature

It's taken a year and four months work just to get to the point where he can order his experimental equipment from the manufacturers but Joseph L. Schanz, a graduate student and instructor in mechanical engineering at Purdue university in Lafayette, Ind., is not discouraged. "These things take a lot of time" he says.

Schanz is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Schanz of Hughesville, a graduate of Missouri Valley college and former resident of Marshall.

He is engaged in high temperature steam research of Purdue in pursuit of a sometwhat elusive doctorate degree. His project, the investigation of the effect on heat transmission of scale inside the superheater tubes of steam boilers, is sponsored by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and financed by a group of companies that have appropriated about $150,000 to the ASME for research in this field.

Research Carried On

Part of the $150,000 research program is being carried on at several industrial laboratories and the U.S. Navy Bureau of Ships. Later the results of experimentation at Purdue, the only university involved in the grant and the results obtained in the other laboratories will be correlated. Prof. H. L. Solberg, head of the Purdue School of Mechanical Engineering is directing the research at Purdue and is chairman of the ASME research committee which is directing the project.

His job, Schanz says, is to determine the effects of the formation with years of use or oxide scale on the super-heater tubes in steam boilers. In steam-generating units, live steam is passed through these tubes and superheated to about 1,100 degrees Fahrenheit.. Very substantial savings in fuel would result if the steam could be superheated to 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit and even higher. Superheater tubes sometimes fail, and previous investigations indicate that the greater the difference in temperature between the inside of the tube through which steam is flowing and the outside of the tube which is being heated by combustion gases from the burning of fuel such as oil or gas, the more likely the tube is to fail.

Super-Heater Tubes

One cause of an appreciable difference is between the inner and outer surfaces of these superheater tubes is the formation of layer of oxide scale on the inner surfaces of the tubes. The object of the experimentation at Purdue is to determine accurately just how greatly this scale effects the heat transfer properties of the tubes.

The first step in attacking such a problem Schanz says is to search the literature—books thesis, articles and papers in technical magazines and similar reference sources—to see what has has been done in the field by other investigators. The answer to that question he found was nothing. Result: He had to start from scratch.

The next step was to select the approach to be used investigating the problem. He devised the different methods of attack before finally selecting the one he considered best.

After selecting his method of approach, Schanz spent a year designing his experimental setup. He has recently ordered his equipment and expects to have it in operation by February of 1952, with luck.

And then he can start to work on his thesis, and, perhaps, get that Ph. D. degree.

Robert L. Bolton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Bohon, route 2, Sedalia, has returned to his station in Keywest, Fla., after spending a 20 day leave with his parents.

POLIO PREVENTION

There is evidence that polio can be prevented through proper diet, avoidance of fatigue, thoroughly washing all vegetables and fruits, peeling all fruit that can be peeled, avoiding operations and injections during the polio season. A detailed explanation of all these factors and more can be found in the June and July issues of Prevention Magazine, Box P-6, Emmaus, Pa., for twenty-five cents per copy. Horse races begin Monday afternoon and continue each afternoon through Friday.

Night Show Dazzling

The Cavalcade of Stars, stage show and water ballet, is a big nighttime event from Tuesday through Saturday night. A cast of 75 will present four beautiful production numbers including the highly entertaining and completely novel disappearing water ballet. Many special acts are included in this 10-star program which will be presented once each night except Thursday. That night, due to the big crowd, it will be presented twice.

Big car races will again be run the last Saturday afternoon, following the first annual state tractor rodeo championship that will be held on the morning of August 25. Contestants for this event will have won district contests at other fairs during the summer.

The fair closes on Sunday, August 26, with a 100-mile stock car race in the afternon and Joie Chitwood's Auto Daredevils defying death for the final crowd after dark.

That "Ham What Am"

Another event quite unique for a state fair and started as an experiment for this year, will be the old fashioned Missouri country cured ham breakfast on Wednesday. This will honor Gov. Forrest Smith on Governor's Day and John Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, will be the speaker.

During the fair there will be many other specialities. A balloon ascension like those that were the big thrills of fairs two or three decades ago, but seldom seen since, will be complete with the parachute jump on the final two days of the fair. Betty and Bennie Fox will dare the crowd to watch them as they jitterbug on an 18-inch square platform atop a 135-foot pole.

Fifty high schol bands will play along with the State Fair Band (composed of members of the Ararat Shrine Band of Kansas City), the Kansas City American Legion band, the Jefferson City Legion Drum Corps and the 35th Division Army band, if the latter can complete its arrangements to be present.

Financial Trouble Led To Scientist's Death

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Aug. 4—(AP)—The University of Michigan told today of the faked expense accounts which led to the melodramatic suicide by snake venom of Professor Malcom H. Soule.

The renowned scientist, head of the university's department of bacteriology for 16 years, killed himself with an injection of snake venom and morphine Friday evening after being fired by the University and threatened with prosecution. He was 54 years old.

The university broke its official silence on the sensational affair today with a terse summary of events preceding Dr. Soule's death.

A short time later Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, university president, called for an investigation of university financial records.

Later, Dr. Ruthven said the probe would be confined to books involving Dr. Soule's department.

"We have no evidence or reports that funds have been similarly mishandled by anyone else connected with the university," he said.

Duff Set To Fight For GOP Delegation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—(AP)—Senator Duff (R-Pa) today issued an angry challenge to an opposing GOP group to do battle over Pennsylvania's delegation to the 1952 presidential nominating convention.

Duff, plugging for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as the nominee, said if a group headed by G. Mason Owlett, GOP national committeeman, and former Senator Joseph H. Grundy want a "knockdown and drag-out fight" they can have it.

Duff's statement capped a series of developments showing sharp splits in both major parties as they prepared for the 1952 struggle.

New Hope-New Courage

Thousands of homeless children and their parents—victims of the Kansas-Missouri floods— are depending on you and all the more fortunate people of the nation to give them new hope and courage for an eventual return to normal living.

You can help in this great human rehabilitation task by contributing to the American Red Cross—whose gigantic task it is to relieve the suffering and help these 45,000 homeless people rebuild their lives and homes.

$5,000,000.00 is needed and Pettis Countians have been asked to do their part by contributing $1,700. About $500 of this emergency quota is still needed if we are to say: "We carried our share of the emergency relief."

You can do your part by bringing your contribution to the Pettis County Red Cross Headquarters, 112 West Fourth Street, Sedalia, Mo.

Are Alerted To Aggression

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 4—(AP)—Army Secretary Frank Pace said tonight the Korean war "sounded the alarm which has alerted America and the rest of the free world" to the dangers of aggression.

Then, in an address prepared for delivery at the dedication of a national Junior Chamber of Commerce headquarters building, he cautioned:

"There is but one way we could destroy that meaning. This would be to forget the alarm, to return to complacency, to retard the many phases of our mobilization program that are yet to be achieved, to ignore the joint effort by which we and our allies are seeking to build the defense of Europe."

Pace said that "one year ago today it was uncertain whether we would be able to hold in Korea." But, he added, "today, U. N. forces have successfully driven back the North Koreans; they have met and repulsed superior numbers of Chinese Communist troops."

Of developments at home, Pace said:

"Today, as we review the past year's progress we know that we have come a long way. Our Army has been tripled in size; the Navy has doubled, and the Air Force has expanded from 47 to 87 groups. Our procurement program has been stepped up enormously and already the assembly lines are beginning to turn out greater quantities of tanks, guns and planes."

Wilson Supports A 40-Hour Week

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—(AP)—Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson today called for a continuance of the 40-hour week, with premium pay for overtime. He pictured it as an aid to worker morale and to bigger defense production.

The wage-hour law provides that time and a half must be paid for work in excess of 40 hours in interstate industries. There have been suggestions that defense production would be spurred if the basic 40-hour week were lengthened, without premium pay.

But Wilson issued a statement declaring it is the policy of government agencies to support the principle of overtime pay beyond 40 hours.

"The major consequence of suspending premium pay for overtime in the present defense emergency would be to disrupt the wage stabilization program and industrial relations generally," Wilson said.

He expressed the opinion that labor unions would agitate for higher basic rates if overtime pay was taken away from them. This, he said, would be more unstabilizing than overtime pay.

Rep. MaGee Charges Private Power Firms Bias Army Engineers

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 4—(AP)—Rep. Magee (D-Mo) charged today the Army engineers are influenced by private power companies.

The charge was made at a hearing attended by members of the powerful House committee on public works. The hearing was enlivened by the sharp protests of two farmers who blamed river navigation work by the engineers for increased damage in recent floods.

In reply to a question by Magee, Col. B. C. Snow, upper Mississippi valley division engineer, denied he was approsed to the MVA plan of river control. Magee is an advocate of MVA, which would be patterned after the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Snow said he followed the Pick-Sloan plan because "it is the Army engineers' plan."

Magee then charged: "Power companies are generally opposed to an MVA plan and I can state definitely the Army engineers are under the influence of the power companies."

Elm Disease Found In St. Louis Area

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 4—(AP)—The dread Dutch Elm disease, which has killed more than 4,000,000 trees along the Atlantic seaboard and elsewhere, has been detected in the St. Louis area for the first time.

This was reported by Vance I. Shield, a tree specialist here, who said diagnosis was from infected twig samples he sent to the Dutch Elm laboratory at Hoboken, N. J.

The disease was reported in Illinois last year for the first time.

Shields said at least a dozen infected trees had been found in St. Louis county.

Red Cross Still Needs Blood Donors

There is still a very great need for more blood donors for the two days Monday and Tuesday, when the blood bank mobile will be here in Sedalia and anyone who will give blood is asked to register with the Red Cross.

The great need for blood and the wonderful things that it accomplishes is told in an unsolicited letter to the American Red Cross. The letter follows:

To the Public:

"In a few words I should like to tell why I gave blood through the American Red Cross for use in veterans' hospitals.

"For the entire month of December 1948, I was a patient at Wadsworth hospital, which is a VA hospital. While I did not receive any blood, I did see the blood being used to save lives and to help make life a little more enjoyable for those who will never get well. It was indeed a thrilling sight to see what just one pint of blood can do and to see how these men appreciate what is being done for them.

"I have given blood a number of times because I enjoy helping other people, but I never did know just what it really meant to those who received it. Now after seeing the blood used, I feel it my duty as a veteran to help those less fortunate than I. It is really a wonderful feeling when one knows just how much it means to give even a little.

"My advice to everyone is visit a veterans' hospital and observe the wonderful things that are being done there. You will want to give your blood at every opportunity once you see life being poured back into seemingly lifeless human beings."

Sincerely,
Hank Schiff,
William Jewell College,
Liberty, Missouri.

Drop By Drop Rain Is Carrying Nation To Seas

By Robert E. Geiger

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—(AP)—A navy engineer says raindrops pack the punch of an atomic bomb.

Drop by drop, he says—as in the midwestern floods — they are blasting this nation into the seas.

Does this sound like the well known soil conservation sermon dinner for years into American ears?

Well, it is—but with a new twist.

W. D. Ellison says floods occur and farm land is damaged by rain because most soil conservation is aimed at preventing damage from running water, with dams, terraces and contour plowing.

Ellison says the emphasis should be placed on preventing rain from striking earth with full force.

Even in a gentle rain, he said, the millions of drops in one storm strike earth with the combined force of a bomb.

The remedy, according to Ellison, is a simple one. It is to keep the land covered heavily with grass, crops, brush, trees, even weeds.

He has close-up, slow-motion movies showing how blades of plant life break rain's full force. Each drop is scattered into many tiny droplets. They trickle gently downward to the roots of plans and thence into the soil. Eventually they reach nature's great underground storage reservoirs and may be held there for use in a day of drought, Ellison says.

Plants Like Sponge

The navy engineer, who worked more than 20 years on soil conservation investigations for the Department of Agriculture, says that when land is covered with plants it is like a giant sponge that can absorb many storms.

But when it is denuded of vegetation, he says, land is like a great concrete cover. When rain strikes it it rolls off, forms sheets of water rushing downhill into rivers that swell to flood crest.

But while flood damage to houses and bridges is spectacular, even more costly damage is done to the land itself, Ellison says—valuable humus and minerals are churned up into mud and float away, with the heavier parts, like sand, remaining behind.

Ellison acknowledges many soil conservation methods now in use, such as contour farming and terracing, are good as far as they go, but he says:

"They are of little value as water savers in heavy rainstorms. About all they do is to prevent runoff water from carving gullies. The valuable, light parts of the soil float away with flood waters that roll on and on.

"The trouble with my theory, from the viewpoint of many conservationists, is that it involves nothing spectacular or dramatic, like the construction of great dams and contours—only a drop of rain and a blade of grass."

Ellison doesn't say that the farming methods he champions would have prevented all of the high water that has occurred in the Missouri and other midwestern river basins this summer.

He believes dams and contour farming are necessary. But he says the dams wouldn't have to be so large or so numerous if more water was held back on the soil by vegetation.

Ellison began forming his theories about soil conservation while with the Department of Agriculture. In 1948 he left that department to go with the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks as adviser on soil conservation troubles occurring on more than 5,000,000 acres of land contained in navy shore reservations.

Protecting Range

He estimates that in the great plains country it takes from 2,000 to 3,000 pounds of grass on each acre to protect range lands from raindrop damage. He says a great deal of this land has less than 1,000 pounds of grass per acre today.

His experiments indicate that after land is covered with from 2,000 to 3,000 pounds of grass per acre it has reached almost maximum protection from rain. From a conservation standpoint little can be gained by increasing the stand of grass.

Ellison believes the grass cover on pastures could be increased sufficiently if fewer livestock were allowed on them for a season or two—providing moisure conditions meanwhile were good.

On other lands, where crops are raised, Ellison says if more care were taken to keep the ground covered at all times of the year it would make a great difference in water runoff during storms.

If crops can't be kept on land at all times of the year he says the trash from previous crops, such as stubble from wheat and stalks from corn, should be left on the surface and not plowed under.

The Agriculture department advocates such farming methods, but Ellison says too little emphasis is planned upon its value compared with the value many conservationists and engineers place on dam construction and terrace building.

"Unless we study the raindrop more carefully we can't tame it," Ellison says. "I am convinced America's future welfare hinges on a raindrop."

Family Kibitzers Make It Tough On The Military

By Edward O. Ethell

DENVER, Aug. 4—(AP)—General Joe never knows what he'll hear next.

He can't go to the neighborhood drugstore without an irate wife asking why her husband had to stay on the base the night before, ruining family picnic plans.

When his home phone rings, it's likely a mother wanting to be sure her son will have the week-end free.

Brig. Gen. Joe C. Moffitt was in the middle of a conference when his telephone rang. An irate father of a youngster in Moffitt's 140th fighter bomber group reported:

"For three months now, my boy has been wearing one pair of pants. They were worn out when he got them. He comes home about three times a week. His mother has to drop everything, mend those pants, wash 'em, dry 'em, press 'em, get the kid back to the base.

"My wife is going crazy and so am I. Don't we pay enough taxes for the kid to have the pants he's entitled to?"

Moffitt ordered his staff to see that the boy got his trousers. Minutes later, the bewildered young man was taking a jeep ride with a Lieutenant Colonel. It was after duty hours, but a Captain and four supply men were waiting at a warehouse. They pawed through stacks of trousers, finally came up smiling with three that fit.

General Joe's problems constitute a prime example of why the armed forces send their men to distant bases for training. At home, there are too many wives, fathers and mothers looking over their shoulders.

The 140th is a Colorado-Wyoming-Utah air guard outfit. The bulk of the officers and men at Buckley field just east of Denver are from Denver. To add to their woes, Buckley is a naval station. They're dependent on nearby Lowry air base for supply and Fitzsimons army hospital for medical service.

When the unit was called to duty, there weren't even barracks fit for habitation. The men lived at home. Most now live on the base—at least part of the time.

"We won't be a real outfit until we get away from here," said one veteran noncom. "This active duty is just like any other regular job to most fellows. They still think and act like civilians."

Rearranged Rosters

In one week, 1st Sgt. Robert L. Johnson of headquarters squadron rearranged duty rosters because:

1. A man couldn't miss going home the night of his wife's birthday party;

2. A man's father was ill and the man had to help at the store, and,

3. A star ballplayer had to go to town unexpectedly because a city softball league scheduled was changed.

But that's all part of an effort by Moffitt and his topkicks to keep everybody happy. They shudder when they think of the rumble that would cross Denver if morale broke down.

Still, there's none of mama calling up to say junior's too sick to go to work. Just because junior's a little sleepy. The medics immediately dispatch an ambulance to haul the man back to base. If he is sick, he's treated. If he isn't, he's embarrassed.

To help head off trouble, there's a character guidance council to help iron out personal or mental problems. And there's a hardship board to study any case where a family is suffering because the man was called to active duty.

There also is a genuine effort to fit round pegs in round holes, as far as job assignments go. It doesn't always work.

One disgrunted man asked for reclassification. He was studied and interviewed. He was tested for aptitude. Finally, the classification officer proudly told the man he would make a perfect plumber and would be assigned as a plumber immediately.

"Plumber?" the man shouted. "My father's a plumber. I'm a plumber. I joined the air force to get away from plumbing. I hate it."

Cpl. Jack A. Wilcox, son of Ruth Wilcox, 1308 East Fifth, who has been stationed at Ft. Sill, Okla., for the past ten months has been assigned to overseas duty. Before his induction he was a bus driver for the City Bus Co.

Glenn Brill Recovers From Robber's Beating

Mrs. W. J. Brill, 316 East Tenth, received word Friday that X-rays of her son Glenn M. Brill, recently injured by three robbers near Denver, Colo., show no broken bones.

Doctors at Mercy hospital in Denver also assured Mrs. Brill that her son was recovering satisfactorily.

Brill, a Denver advertising man and former Sedalian, was beaten and robbed last Saturday when he stopped to give assistance to three men and a like number of women in an apparently-stalled car.

If you want your cabin or recreation room to reveal your fishing hobby, how about hanging willow fishing creels on either side of the fireplace, filled with artificial ivy; or put a liner in the creel and plant real greenery. Hang the creel by the shoulder strap and prop the lid against the wall, allowing the ivy to fall over the sides of the creel. You might add a "White Miller," "Red Ant" or "Orange Asher" (from your fly book) strategically placed on the ivy for that "authentic touch."

Your Wardrobe
By Frances Sagaloff at Sage's

CORDUROY SEPARATES will be more important than ever this season. If you haven't seen the colors, the most popular ones are red, kelly, desert rose, spice, gold, purple and chartreuse. Mix them or match them — it's great fun. Some skirts are narrow while others are slightly flared. Jackets are short and in some instances belted. Most weskits and skirts are coming in matched. Of course, there are slacks and several new ideas in blouse type tops. One in particular that I have seen has a bat sleeve that is three-quarter length and it is very fitted at the waist with a wide band. It can be worn with a skirt or as a jacket over a casual dress. Another smart item is the full length corduroy coat with a matching cap available. They are warm enough for the first cool days and very gay. Of course, there are lots of corduroy dresses so go browse through them soon and make your selections because they will be very important a month from now.

Some Dreams Are Later Duplicated

By RELMAN MORIN
(For Hal Boyle)

NEW YORK, Aug. 4—(AP)—Did you ever keep a dairy of your dreams? The real ones, that is, not day-dreams.

Sometimes they come true, or seem to.

An English scientist, struck by his own experiences in that field, ran a check on his dreams some years ago. He simply kept a notebook on the night-table, and whenever he remembered a dream he set it down on paper and put a date to the entry. The fact of recording the dream helped, of course, to fix it in his memory. And he discovered that it was important to record every detail, however small, meaningless, or outlandish it appeared to be.

He claimed that the account showed, in due course, some of the dreams were later duplicated in actual experiences. They came true.

To amplify the evidence, he enlisted some of his friends in the experiment. They logged their dreams over a period of a year or more. Their experiences he said, were the same as his. Finally he wrote a book and called it "An Experiment With Time."

I hadn't thought about the book in many years until the other night in a theatre. Suddenly, the scene seemed intensely familiar, the players, the setting and the atmosphere. And I knew, before they were spoken, what the next four or five lines of dialogue would contain. They did, word for word.

This sort of experience of course is extremely common. Most people have encountered it.

You are sitting in a room, and suddenly the people, a movement, the topic of conversation seem to fell into particular pattern. You seem to realize it. From somewhere beyond consciousness an erie, haunting sensation, a this-has-happened before, sweeps over you.

The English scientist would tell you that it did happen before. You dreamed that experience one night, and at some later date—months or even years later—it took place exactly.

The records of parapsychology and psychic research are crammed with stories of dreams that later took place, in detail, in actual events. Many have been investigated and documented by careful researchers. A rational explanation seems not to be available in every case.

Story Intrigues

The one that intrigues me is the story—allegedly proved true—of a dream that two people shared at the same time.

Two men, good friends, were occupying the same cabin on an ocean liner bound for New York Crossing the North Atlantic, the ship ran into a gale so heavy that the news of it was reported in the New York newspapers. One morning during the voyage, one of the men said:

"Had a queer dream last night. It was about your wife. I dreamed that she came into the cabin and stood for a moment, staring at you. she seemed terribly worried . . . didn't say anything . . . just looked at you and then went out."

When the ship reached port, the woman met her husband on the dock. She asked about the storms. She said she had read about them and knowing his ship was caught in them, had been extremely anxious for his safety. She added: "I had the most vivid dream, one night, about coming into your cabin. You seemed to be sound asleep, storm or no storm. I suppose it was all because I was so worried."

Then, oddly enough, she described the cabin accurately, although she had never seen it. Comparing notes, it developed that the two dreams occurred on the same night—or the two parts of the same dream.

Assuming the English scientist's theory is correct — that some dreams are "previews" or real experiences — you encounter an interesting question:

Is everything fixed and foreordained? If a dream is a glimpse into the future, does it mean that what you saw will surely happen later?

Well, in some cases, I'd like to think so. Others can be put down to sardine sandwiches after midnight.

Worries at Home Bob Up To Disturb The Military

By Elton C. Fay

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—(AP)—The military's cup of bitterness was full even before the West Point cadet scandal welled up this week-end to run it over.

The military, busy with fighting a war and negotiating a truce in Korea, has been having a bad time at home. It has had a hand in many things—and sometimes it seems like the hand has five thumbs.

High officials gave conflicting information to Congress, protocol incidents arose out of the visit of foreign defense ministers, a fresh quarreling broke out among the armed forces.

Amid these unwanted and unplanned incidents the Defense department decided it should make public some other smoldering situations—like the cribbing on examinations by 90 West Point cadets, including some of the varsity football team, and the removal from command of a general charged with accepting favors from contracting firms.

Some of the incidents were fresh, some dated back several weeks or months.

Pentagon leaders, including Defense Secretary Marshall, voiced before congressional committees and elsewhere deep worry over what they said are the continuing and even growing dangers of fresh war. But even while they were meditating over the public's psychology and urging passage of the Military Service and Training Act, the Defense department decided that the May draft call would be cut back substantially. Then it whittled the call for June still further.

It explained that a continued increase of volunteer enlistments, fewer Korean war casualties than expected and a large number of reenlistments was responsible. But in the minds of many it raised questions why that was done if the world danger was so critical.

Sounded Sour Notes

Last week, the Pentagon produced a medley of psychological warfare and press information. The notes were so sour that the high command hastened to disavow the whole thing.

Reporters at a regular weekly off-the-record briefing were read a statement which said, among other things, that U. N. forces halted an offensive after the Soviets proposed armistice negotiations in Korea. Actually, war communiques and other information show the offensive was stopped by bad weather and before the truce proposal.

The officer who read the statement usually does his briefing on the basis of military intelligence. But it developed that this time the army's Psychological Warfare division had written a script, with an idea of getting some ideas across to the enemy—but through the medium of the American press. Neither the press nor the high command liked it when the origin of the statement became known.

Then there was the occasion when Secretary Marshall told a congressional committee that American military strength in Europe would be 400,000. Until that time, defense officials had been talking about a figure of 200,000 or a little over. There were questions. Marshall sent a letter to the committee saying the figure was correct. Then a few days later Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, testifying before the committee, used a figure of 340,000, including both ground troops and air.

Talk Bases In Spain

The late Admiral Forrest Sherman, at the direction of the State department and the joint chiefs of staff, flew to Spain to talk with Franco about American use of naval and air bases there. But, it developed later, the mission was so secret that no one had informed a man with high interest in air bases overseas, Air Secretary Thomas Finletter. He knew about Sherman's mission only when he read it in a newspaper.

When interservice controversies and jealousies reappeared, after a two-year lull, they had a new touch. In the original wrangle, the air force and navy quarreled essentially over who should do strategic bombing and whether the air force's long range B-36 was as good as the air force claimed. This week the dispute had a new feature—the issue was tactical bombers and fighters.

And the army, which before had sat smugly on the sidelines while the air force and navy waged their feud, was in on this wrangle. The question was whether the army, like the marine corps, should have one wing of fighter-bombers for each division of ground troops. The air force thought that plan of allocation was wrong.

Into the airgument strayed a side-debate on how many missions in Korea were flown by the air force, how many by navy-marine planes. Rep. W. Sterling Cole (R-NY), a naval reserve officer, proposed a congressional investigation.

A few days ago the defense ministers of Britain and France flew to Washington to attend a four-power parley with the United States and Canada on the question of arms standarization. When Emanuel Shinwell and M. Jules Moch arrived last year for NATO conferences here, the highest Defense department officials and military commanders were on hand at the airport to greet them. But this time, the undersecretary of the army and vice-chief of army staff composed the official greeting party.

The official explanation was that Marshall had designated the army, headed by Army Secretary Frank Pace, as the Defense department's agency in the negotiations. Pace, however, was not at the airport for the customary plush-carpet welcoming of distinguished foreign visitors.

All in all, the military figures it's had its share of woe lately.

Old Fiddlers Attract Crowd

Estimate 3,500 At Booster Program At Liberty Park

A record breaking crowd attended the Old Fiddlers contest Friday night at Liberty park. The crowd, estimated at 3,500, was the largest to witness the outdoor programs which are being presented by the Missouri Pacific Booster club.

Melvin Nowlin of Warsaw was the winner of the contest with the number "Marmaduke's Hornpipe." He was accompanied by C. T. Johnson also of Warsaw. Second place winner was Forrest Reed of Houstonia with "Ragtime Annie." Third was Dick Logan of Knob Noster with "Soldiers Joy," and fourth place went to Andy Musslin of Syracuse, with the tune "Rabbit in the Pea Patch." The winners were awarded cash prizes.

The winners were selected by popular applause of the crowd.

Palmer Nichols, Chief Booster, opened the program with a short talk on Missouri Pacific activities and then introduced Bob Mabry who presided as master of ceremonies and kept the program running with his wise cracks, songs and jokes. Aside from the fiddlers contest there was other high class entertainment with Ernest Mulberry singing "Beautiful Texas," and "Ohio"; Barbara Salmons singing "The Legend of the Robin," and "The Hole in the Bottom of the Sea." Larry Turner, a youngster from Green Ridge, entertained the crowd with fancy rope tricks which proved highly entertaining. C. T. Johnson of Warsaw gave a tap dance and "Bob" Mabry sang a sacred number to conclude an excellent program.

Next Friday night the final program of the series will be presented in the band stand with the theme "The History of Railroading." This will be presented by the Pettis County Historical society with J. L. Curry and J. O. Jenkins in charge. The stage will be decorated as a garden scene with old time costumes and old time songs, followed with colored slides depicting the progress of railroading.

Dismissals Draw Angry Comment From Cadets

Majority Of Army's Gridders Have Apparently Been Ousted

WEST POINT, N. Y., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Tight-lipped officials at West Point steadfastly refused today to give names in the scandal involving 90 cadets accused of cheating at examinations, but it appeared that most of Army's once-mighty football team was included.

"No one ha· been discharged or dismissed to this moment," said the academy public information officer when asked about the football players.

Blaik's Son Blasts Academy

With the shadow hanging over many members of the once mighty knights of the Hudson, the son of Coach Earl H. (Red) Blaik bitterly denounced the academy for the manner used in breaking the news.

Only two players on the large squad Coach Blaik expected to lead into his eleventh Army football campaign have been disclosed thus far as "in the clear."

2 Stars in Clear

One is John (Eddie) Weaver, a first string end on the offensive platoon, and high scorer on Army's 1950-51 basketball team. Weaver's father announced at Kingston, N. Y., that his son had telephone that he was "not involved."

The other is Richard Gominman, guard on the 1950 team. His mother, Mrs. George Inman, said he was in Vincennes, Ind., on a 28-day leave. He told her he had "a clean bill of health." Inman, whose father is football coach at Vincennes high school, said he planned to return to West Point Sept. 1.

Blaik Going To See Father

Bob Blaik, son of the coach, was intercepted this morning by newsmen as he was entering the gymnasium, presumably to see his father who has his office there.

Young Blaik refused to say whether he was involved, but he used the pronoun "we" as he discussed the ousted cadets.

Not Allowed To Notify Parents

"We are not allowed to notify our parents all over the country in advance," he said. "First notice they got was from the newspapers and over the radio."

Col. James B. Leer, West Point public information officer, told a press conference later that the Army in Washington was to blame for the way the news was announced.

"It was impossible," he said, "due to the fact that the Army put out the news on the (press) wires and notified us at the same time, for anybody to have notified the individuals any earlier."

Leer hurried over to the barracks after the group of cadets had talked with the newsmen, many had complained they were not permitted to telephone parents.

Leer Says Somebody Slipped

"Somebody slipped. They are phoning now," Leer said.

Coach Blaik, whose teams have won 75 games, lost 11 and tied six in the last ten seasons, was contacted briefly by reporters after dodging them for almost 24 hours. Asked for comment, he said flatly: "No."

At the gathering in front of the gymnasium, one of the 90 cadets involved said:

Say 200 Others Cheated

"At least 200 corps cadets did the same thing."

He and others in the angry group around young Blaik declined to give their names. The youth said the cadets to be dismissed admitted the cheating when questioned, but that others equally guilty denied under oath any complicity.

"I'd rather have these men who told the truth lead me into battle than the others," said another in the group.

One member of the gathering said he knew that "over a hundred members of the class graduated in June were involved, but were not punished.

Leer Denies Grads Included

This brought a denial from Colonel Leer, who met the press after conferring privately with Maj. Gen. Frederick A. Irving, superintendent of West Point.

"Insofar as I know, the evidence does not bear out the statement that any graduates have been involved," he said. Newsmen asked Leer to arrange a meeting for them with the superintendent, but he said:

"He is terribly busy. He has no new information which was not made public. As soon as he has, I am sure he will give that to you and will see you."

Levis Defeat Houstonia 8-7

The Levis nosed out the Houstonia V.F.W. softball club Friday night at Houstonia by a score of 8-7 in a league game.

Belsha, on the mound for the local club after getting off to a shaky start, went on to pitch a six hitter, while his team mates touched the Houstonia pitchers, Sevier and Nutt for 10 hits.

The lead changed througout the game with the score in a deadlock going into the seventh. Then the Levis pushed across two runs on a triple by G. Thompson and a homer by C. Barr.

Houstonia made a strong bid in their half of the seventh, but were held to one run.

P. Evans lead the hitting attack for the local group getting three for four with B. Hill and E. Barnes hitting circuit blows for the Levis. E. Plummille and L. Pummille hit homers for Houstonia. Simon caught for the Levis with Pummille doing the receiving for Houstonia.

Sunday night the Levis journey to Carrollton for a game.

All players making this trip are requested to meet at 420 Wilkerson at 6:00 p.m. to leave for Carrollton.

Town-Country Journeys To Knob Noster Today

Town and Country will play the Knob Noster Lions club at 2:30 p.m. today at Knob Noster.

Bill Haxworth or White will pitch for Town and Country and "Gabby" Hayes will catch.

All players are to meet at 12:15 at Broadway and Limit.

Teenettes of Sacred Heart Defeat Smithton

Tonight the Teenettes will play the local T and C Insurance girls softball team at the 16th and Center diamond at 8:00 p.m.

Chiefs Visit McKays Today For Loop Tilt

Sedalia Chief, leaders of the Southern division of the Central Missouri Ban Johnson league, will put their one game advantage over Boonville and Moberly on the line tonight when they face the Columbia McKays at Columbia.

Tied For 1st Half Crown

The Columbians finished their first half play this past week with an overwhelming triumph over the Jefferson City Kiwanis. The win over the Capitol City nine enabled Columbia to lay-claim to one-third of the first half crown with Moberly and Boonville, the other tri-titlists.

In second half competition, the McKays have a 3-2 ledger, good for fourth place.

Chiefs Sport 5-1 Record

In gaining the second half lead, the Chiefs have marked-up five victories against a loss to the Moberly Miners at Moberly. Tonight's game will be the first meeting of Sedalia and Columbia in the second half.

Manager Joe Imhauser will probably toil on the mound for his Chiefs. In his last outing, against Moberly, Imhauser displayed his top form of the season, limiting the Miners to seven scattered hits and one run.

Elmer Willingham, manager of the McKays, is expected to nominate his ace, Don Poore, or his son, John Willingham, who has won six games this year, to hurl agains the locals.

Probable Starters For Chiefs

Other probable starters for the Chiefs will be Bill Hawley, 1b; Bill Morgan, 2b; Don Broaddus, ss; Ralph Waters, 3b; Bill Holst, lf; Foster McGuire or Bill McCrary, cf; Larry Vilmer, rf, and John Cochran, c.

Willingham's starting line-up will probably be a question until game time. Many of his players plays for the Columbia Junior Legion team which is participating in the state Junior Legion tournament at Trenton. If the Legion players are back he will probably use the following players, in an attempt to ston the Chiefs: Whitesides, ss; Tekotte 2b; Musgrave cf; Hafner, c; Webb, lf; Jones, 1b; McQuitty, rf, and Sapp 2b.

The Chiefs will leave from the Cal Rodgers service station at 4:30 p.m.

Van Dyne Scores A Hole-In-One In Club Tourney

Big John Van Dyne stole the show Saturday afternoon in first-round matches of the club championship at the Sedalia Country club.

Van Dyne, known as a long-ball hitter, turned into a precision artist in his match with Dick Sklar by holing out his tee shot on the 118-yard seventh hole. Sklar, on his way to an upset at that point, lost the match 3 and 2. The victor hit an eight-iron for the hole-in-one.

In another first round contest Gentry Patterson edged Tom Jenkins one-up in 18 holes.

Last Thursday Dick Gorrell advanced to the second-round by eliminating Victor Scott 2 and 1.

All three matches were in the tournament's lower bracket.

Five matches are on the docket today. In the final contest of the lower bracket Phil Costello meets Tom Yount. Upper bracket tilts pit Charles Patterson, the tournament's medialist, against J. J. McGrath; Aubry Owen against C. D. Hieronymus; Bill Gibson against Sam Highleyman; and Herb Studer against Carl Oswald.

The McGrath-Patterson match should be the feature of the day.

Easy Victory Enables Yanks To Hold Lead

NEW YORK, Ag. 4—(AP)—The New York Yankees came to life in the late innings today and humbled the last place St. Louis Browns, 11-3, to protect their slender lead in the American league pennant race.

Jim Suchecki checked the Yanks on three hits over the first five innings but lost his touch in the sixth when the Yanks exploded for six runs to ice the game. Yogi Berra's three-run, two-out double was the big blow of the rally.

With the score 1-1, Gil McDougald walked to begin the rally. One out later pitcher Bob Kuzava popped a double to left. Gene Woodling tapped to first baseman Ben Taylor and McDougald slid home safely ahead of Taylor's throw to the plate, Kuzava moving to third on the play.

Joe Collins grounded to second baseman Bobby Young, but Kuzava beat Young's throw to the plate to make it 3-1. Bob Brown popped up for the second out but Joe DiMaggio walked to load the bases. Berra followed with his three-run double to right. Johnny Mize reached base on an error with McOougald, up for the second time, beat out a hit to drive in Berra with the sixth run.

The Yanks added a pair in the seventh on a two-run homer by Collins and closed out their scoring with two more in the eighth against Bob Mahoney. Berra belted a homer for the first run and Hank Bauer scored the second on the front end of a triple steal.

Kuzava limited the Browns to six hits. The Browns scored in the fourth on a double by Matt Batts, single by Cliff Mapes and error by Phil Rizzuto. They picked up another in the seventh on a triple by Fred Marsh and Taylor's ground out. Batts tripled and scored the Browns' final run in the ninth on Mapes' ground out.

Feller and the A's Dick Fowler were hooked-up in a 2-2 tie until the eighth inning when Larry Doby tripled with two on and two out to give the Indians the edge. A double by Dale Mitchell—his third hit—and a walk to Bob Avila preceded Doby's blast off the right field wall. Feller weakened in the ninth and Lou Brissie took over with two on and two out, fanning former teammate Elmer Valo to end the game. Feller's winning number is the highest in the major leagues.

Steve Souchock opened the inning with a single and Groth followed with his second home run of the season to win the game. Walt Dropo accounted for the Red Sox run with a home run in the sixth inning off Fred Hutchinson.

Hutchinson was relieved in the eighth by Hank Borowy, who gained credit for his first victory. Ted Gray hurled the ninth for the Tigers and struck out pinch-hitter Charley Maxwell, Dom DiMaggio and Jonhhy Pesky in order.

Sport Scraps

By D. Kelly Scruton

SEDALIA'S Jack Cooney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cooney, Webster Groves and formerly of Sedalia, is the spark of the Muskogee, Okla. Giants. From time to time the former Junior American Legion ball player lands his name in the news stories concerning the Western Association, because of his steady fielding and hitting.

Most recent was the Giants-Hutchinson Elks game Friday night at Hutchinson. The Giants were edged out 11-10 in an erratic 10-inning contest. The game saw the Elks collect 14 hits while the Giants 15.

Cooney out of his five trips to the plate accounted for nearly a third of the Giants hits. He collected four singles.

No doubt about it, Cooney is valuable property of the New York Giants and may get his chance in the majors in the near future.

Cooney Saturday—that's the latest—again was mentioned in the sports story of the Elks beating the Giants 6-4. Cooney had a 1.000 percent for the game. Five times at bat he singled twice and drew three walks.

WRESTLING fans of Sedalia will be glad to learn Ray Eckert has been invited to Johannesburg, South Africa, to meet Willie Liebenberg the South African heavyweight wrestling champion. He will make a three month stay and plans to wrestle in Capetown and other South African cities.

Ray and Mrs. Eckert will leave the latter part of the month for New York from which place they will take a plane and fly to the Union of South Africa, a two-day trip. Their son Gordon will remain at California with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pile and attend school there this year.

Eckert has always been a headliner at the Sedalia wrestling shows, he has his "hated" ringsiders while he also has his "favorite" ringside followers. But anyway you take it Eckert always gives the wrestling fans their money's worth as far as wrestling entertainment is concerned.

SEVERAL times I have mentioned the new bleachers at the Missouri State fair grounds, the improvement is terrific, more than was anticipated by my first writing. The bleachers have shaped up, they are practically complete, the only work left is the decorating of the concession stands beneath them. This improvement alone gives an added touch to the fair racing institution.

I might add, not only the racing institution, but it is so large it will accomodate several thousand more persons who desire to see attractions on the race track, other than—just races. This section of the fair grounds also has before the stands the night horse show held the opening Sunday night of the fair. Thereafter the nightly Cavalcade of Stars stage and water ballet.

According to W. E. "Bill" Preston, secretary-manager of the fair, the new bleachers will accomodate approximately 4,500 persons, 3,000 more than the old wooded structure, while the grandsand itself has been rfevamped with the addition of 64 more boxes or 500 more seats and the seating arrangement in the stand has been added to giving 500 more reserved seats.

In other words 12,500 Missourians are assured of seats. There is additonal standing room in a space south of the grandsand, and on the north end of the bleachers which with an over-all standing room will take care of more than 5,000 more people, this is a conservative estimate according to the fair officials.

All-in-all it really gives Missouri's fair a "big time" look as well as an operation.

INCIDENTALLY, there was started sometime ago a rumor the bleachers were not constructed properly. Let's put a stop to such a rumor right here and now. Those bleachers are as safe as the grandstand at Sportsman Park in St. Louis.

The construction is far better than when they were used in Lubbock, Tex., from which exposition they were purchased. Additional steel beams and supports were added. The support beams are set in concrete, and not just small pillars, but large round and in the ground from four to six feet. There isn't a possible chance of "settling" or of the braces become weak in any way.

The best way for a person to assure themselves about the construction is to take a look. Not being an engineer, but having talked with a couple about the situation, I assure those of you who want bleachers seats, they are as safe as any constructed.

Richest Purse In Harness History Offered

26th Hambletonian May See A Record Field Of Starters

(Special to The Democrat-Capital)

GOSHEN, N. Y.,—The six-way split of a $90,000 purse and the failure of any leading candidate to dominate the tuneup events is expected to provide the impetus for a record-breaking number of starters when the 26th edition of the famed Hambletonian Stake comes up for decision at Good Time Park August 8th.

25 Might Enter

Observers believe that at least 20 3-year-old trotters will take the word and indications are that as many as 25 may try for a piece of the richest purse in the history of the harness racing sport. In 1945 there were 19 starters, high water mark in that category to date.

If there are 15 starters, the race will be worth just over $90,000 with 55% of that earmarked for the winner. For each starter in excess of 15, the gross purse will jump $667. The richest previous race was the 1950 version which was worth $75,209.

No Individual Standout

Although no individual colt or filly stands out to date, a trio of two-horse entries is expected to receive strong backing on the day of the race.

The one-two punch entries are those of The Hayes Fair Acres Stable of DuQuoin, Ill., The Two Gaits Farm Stable of Carmel, Ind., and the Del Miller Stable from Meadow Lands, Pa.

The Hayes Stable, which won last year's classic with Lusty Song will go with Mighty Fine and Spennib, both of whom have won important tuneups during the past few months. Benny Schue will drive Mighty Fine and Spud Fitzpatrick probably will have the mount behind Spennib.

2 Named From Two Gaits

The Two Gaits Farm Stable, owned by Leo C. McNamara, has Scotch Rhythm and Prince Colby. Scotch Rhythm, a sister to Iusty Song, has skipped the most recent 3-year-old races, trainer Ralph Baldwin preferring to prep her for The Hambletonian at the mile track here. Beldwin will drive the filly. No driver has been designated for Prince Colby.

Dil Miller, who won with Lusty Song in 1950 when he was driving the Hayes horses, has the filly Betsy Volo and the colt Watcha. The former is owned by W. N. Reynolds, Winston Salem, N. C. Watcha is the property of Charles Provost, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Race Is Wide Open

But there is no certainty that the winner will come from among this half dozen. The race is still wide open and any one of the other eligibles, including a pair of dark horses, could come on to take it all.

Guy Crippen will have Mainliner set; Johnny Simpson is sharpening up Bernie Hanover and Ben White and his son, Gib, are readying the Ohio colt True Boy. Other top candidate and their drivers are Great Hanover (Harry Whitney), Mahlon Hanover (Joe O'Brien), House of Lords (Curly Smart) and Irish Sweetheart (Frank Ervin).

Ervin Trainer of "Dark Horse"

The two "dark horses" are Yankee Hanover, trained by Ervin, and Imperial Hanover, from the stable of the two-time Hambletonian winner Tommy Berry.

Yankee Hanover has won one of his two starts this year and has impressed horsemen with his tremendous turn of speed. Imperial Hanover, the $72,00 yearling of two years ago, has finished last in the only four starts of his career but he has a time trial record of 2.03 2-5, fastest of the season for 3-year-old trotters. If his manners are sharp, he could regain most of his purchase price in one afternoon.

Fish-Duck Story

STAVANGER, Norway —(AP)—Julius Tengesdal saw from his rowing boat a flock of ducklings dive for food, one of them reappeared upside down. Tengesdal grabbed for it, got the duckling—and the trout that had caught its head, into the boat.

Holland Challenges Luptow's Title

Koslo Hurls Easy Triumph Over Redbirds

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 4—(AP)—Southpaw Dave Koslo turned in a masterful two-hit performance tonight as the New York Giants overwhelmed the St. Louis Cardinals 10-0 before 17,824. A pop single by Harry Lowrey in the second and a single to short right field by Chuck Diering in the ninth were the only hits off Koslo.

It was the second two-hitter pitched by Koslo against the Cardinals this season. He did it earlier in the year at the Polo Grounds in New York.

The 31-year-old lefthander has pitched only three complete games this season, all against the Cardinals. He has started 12.

The triumph tonight was his sixth against eight losses.

He struck out three and walked only two, while the Giants battered three Cardinal pitchers for 16 hits.

Lowrey's single in the second fell just out of reach of second baseman Dave Williams. Diering was the last of four base runners for the Cardinals and none of them got past first base.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4—(AP)—Hank Sauer broke out of a batting slump to double home the winning run as the Chicago Cubs outlasted the Boston Braves, 7 to 6, in 11 innings before 13,866 today.

The victory, the Cubs' third in a row and seventh in their last nine games, was credited to Joe Hatten, who checked the Braves without a hit after relieving Dutch Leonard with one away in the ninth. It was Hatten's second win against one defeat.

'The Whip' Hurls Reds To 2nd Win Over Bums

CINCINNATI, Aug. 4— (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds made it two in a row over the National league leading Brooklyn Dodgers today as they clubbed Don Newcombe for all of their runs in a 7-3 game. Ewell Blackwell, pitching his first complete game since July 15, had some trouble in the late innings but by that time his mates had given him a fat lead. It was Blackwell's 10th win against as many setbacks.

The Reds jumped Newcombe for four runs in the fourth. Rookie Roy McMillian climaxed the uprising with a two-run single. The Reds tagged Newcombe for three more in the fifth to clinch the game. The loss ended Newcombe's nine game winning streak.

VFW Jalopy Races To Be Held Today

The second running of the Sedalia VFW Jalopy races will be held this afternoon on the newly constructed track at 28th and Ingram. Today's races will mark the first time for an oval track instead of the figure 8 affair.

The new track, constructed by the Howard Construction Company, is smooth and the drivers believe they can attain higher speeds.

Glen Jones, promoter of the races for the VFW, said Wednesday night that 20 cars may enter today.

Tragedy Halts Gold Cup Race

SEATTLE, Aug. 4—(AP)—The speedboat Slo-Mo-Shun V won the gold cup today in a race cut short by the tragic sinking of another participant, the Quicksilver, with two men aboard.

Owner-driver Orth Mathiot, Portland, Ore. tugboat operator, and Tom Whitaker, a mechanic, were aboard the Quicksilver which vanished beneath the blue water of scenic lake Washington at high speed.

Quicksilver Was 4th

The Quicksilver was running fourth in a field of seven boats and had just entered its third lap when it disappeared in a cloud of spray. It was halfway down the straightaway in front of the officials' barge when the sudden end came.

The boat sank in 60 feet of water a diver was called to aid in the search for the bodies.

Nothing but splinters, two helmets, two life jackets and a seat cushion were floating at the spot when the Coast Guard arrived.

Only Two Heats Count

Referee Mel Crooks announced that the race would stand on the basis of point totals at the end of the first two heats which saw the Slo-Mo-Shun V surging around the course at average speeds of better than 90 miles an hour.

This left Slo-Mo-Shun V, handy winner of both heats, as successor to Slo-Mo-Shun IV, last year's gold cup winner.

SloMo-Shun V wound up with 1,600 points, the maximum possible. Second was Horace Dodge's Hornet with 600. The original Slo-Mo-Shun picked up 450. Hurricane IV got 296; Gale II, 264; My Sweetie 198 and Quicksilver 95.

Set New Record

My Sweetie was the former record holder at 86.2.

Victory in the gold cup gave Stanley Sayers, Seattle automobile dealer who owns the two Slo-Mo-Shuns, the right to name next year's course. This practically assures the race for Seattle again.

Ted Jones, who designed both boats and drove the IV to its gold cup triumph last year was at the helm in the IV again today.

2nd Place Fight Takes Spotlight In Smithton Loop

Spotlight in the Smithon community softball league has shifted from the undefeated Reds, who are making a run-a-away of the title, to a two team scrap for second place. The Giants and Phillies are battling for the second place honors.

Results from the full schedule played last week found the Phillies beating the Cards, the Giants downing the Cubs, the Reds walloping the Pirates, and the Braves trouncing the Dodgers.

Game schedule this week:

Tuesday—8:00 p.m.—Cubs vs. Dodgers . 9:30 p.m.— Reds vs. Braves.

Thursday—8:00 p.m. — Phillies vs. Cards. 9:30 p.m.—Pirates vs. Giants.

A homecoming baseball contest for old timers will be played sometime in September. The opponents have not been announced, but will probably be a similar old timers group from another town.

Claim 27 Ducks With One Shot

DARWIN—(AP)— An aborigine claims 27 wild ducks killed with one shot from a shot gun. The wizard shot was made on a lagoon near Daly Waters, Northern Territory.

H. B. Salterod told about the shot when he arrived in Darwin from Daly Waters. He said the lagoon was black with birds.

Hockey Disability

Wilbur Wright was prevented from attending college by an ice hockey accident that disabled him for almost eight years, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Speedway Star Signs

Holland Looms Threat To End Luptow Picnic

Bill Holland, the noted Indianapolis speedway star, loomed today as a major threat to smash Frankie Luptow's long supremacy over all Missouri State Fair auto racing rivals.

The famous 500-mile race winner has entered his powerful Blue Crown Offenhauser in both big car speed programs scheduled for the 1951 Exposition at Sedalia, Sunday, Aug. 19, and Saturday, Aug. 25.

Luptow Stars Past 3 Years

Holland's signed entry culminates weeks of searching the nation's speed ranks for a pilot capable of matching speed and daring with Luptow, who has virtually "owned" the track at Sedalia the past three years.

Holland, winner of the 1949 Indianapolis event and second-place finisher in 1947, 1948 and 1950, has compiled one of the most brilliant records in the annals of auto racing's richest classic.

Holland Has Fine Record

His dirst track racing record is equally spectacular, says Al Sweeney of National Speedways, Inc., who personally signed up Holland for the State Fair competition here.

He pointed out that Holland, from Reading, Pa., had held the Eastern AAA dirt track championship prior to racing at Indianapolis and has since been a standout in competition along the Atlantic seaboard. He claims 26 official dirt track speed records, all of them established on tracks east of the Mississippi river.

Both Drive Offenhausers

For the clash with Luptow at Sedalia, the speedway star will have his own low-slung Offenhauser dirt track racer, not the big car he drove for Lou Moore in the Indianapolis grind.

Sweeney explained the oversized speedway car would be at a disadvantage against Luptow's entry on the fairgrounds oval.

Elated at Holland's entry, Secretary W. E. (Bill) Preston of the State Fair said that he and race officials have scoured the country for a car and driver combination figured to provide Luptow a real battle.

He pointed out that Luptow and his flying Black Panther Offenhauser have whirled to main event victories time after time since the slim Tampa terror won his first race at the 1949 State Fair.

Grim Also A Threat

The lone exception came on the second race day of the 1949 event when young Bobby Grim streaked home first after Luptow had crashed the fence and wrecked. Grim has also entered his new Offenhauser in the approaching State Fair races, Preston reported.

Blues Entertain Jamestown Today At Housel Park

The Northeast Athletic Club's Teen-Age Blues will play Jamestown this afternoon at Housel park at 2:30 o'clock.

Local baseball fans will recall the Jamestown team in the regional high school tournament held here this spring. They were eliminated by the North Kansas City Hornets in the opening round, although they led until the fifth, when they made several errors. The final score in that contest was 12-5.

Going into today's game, the Blues have a 12-5 record. C. A. Smith or Jack Barnes will go after the Blues 13th win with Eldon Lees catching.

Manager Jack Slocum will probably use the following starting line-up: Don Higgins, 1b; Joe Fisher, cf; Bill Watson, ss; Joe Walter, lf; Wiley Walter, rf; Bruce Wall, 3b; and Stan Hickman or Ben Smith, 2b.

Columbia Faces Cape In Jr. Legion Finals

TRENTON, Mo., Aug. 4—(AP)—Columbia and Cape Girardeau moved into the finals of the American Legion junior baseball state tournament today, and will play for the title tomorrow.

Columbia defeated Kansas City Broadway Motors, 15 to 1, tonight in a game called in the sixth inning under the rule that permits stopping games after two hours of play when one team is ahead by ten runs.

The defeat eliminated Kansas City, which has lost to Cape Girardeau this afternoon by a score of 9 to 1.

Midshipman Atkinson Cruised

Midshipman James W. Atkinson, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Atkinson, 2101 East 16th, has recently returned from the U.S. Naval Academy-NROTC training cruise, having served aboard the U.S.S. Missouri (BB63).

The Missouri and the personnel carrier, U.S.S. Burdo, visited ports at Oslo, Norway, Cherbourg, France, including a side trip to Paris, then proceeded to Guantanamo, Cuba for fleet exercises, returning to Norfolk, Va., for disembarkation.

Over three thousand first and third class midshipmen from the Naval Academy and several NROTC universities completed the personnel of the 13-ship task group. The entire group was under the command of Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, Jr., commander of Atlantic cruisers.

Rear Admiral Holloway, Jr., is the son of Prof. James L. Holloway and the late Mamie Holloway, former Sedalians. Mrs. Holloway was the sister of Frank Leaming, city engineer of Sedalia for many years.

Sales Boost Is Indicated By Easing Credit

Installment Periods Stretched By Board Edit

(By The Associated Press)

First effect of the new economic controls law is a boost for automobile and appliances sales in scattered cities, an Associated Press survey indicates.

Easier credit provided under the new law is responsible.

The sales rise is by means general. More than half the cities show no evidence of an upturn.

One large Chicago used car dealer says "there has been no upsurge in sales yet and you can underscore that."

But from all over the nation came reports that "the public hasn't yet caught on to the better credit terms."

The new terms were announced by the Federal Reserve Board Tuesday as President Truman signed the new controls law. They stretch installment periods to 18 months for automobiles, electrical appliances and furniture, and to 36 months for home repairs and improvements.

What Survey Shows

The A.P. survey covered cities in 17 states and the District of Columbia. Here are some of its results:

(1) Sales of appliances or furniture have climbed in Denver, Dallas, Washington, Kansas City, San Francisco, Charlotte, N. C. and Portland, Maine.

(2) New and used automobiles show sales spurts, in one instance as much as 50 per cent, in Kansas City, New Orleans, Detroit, Atlanta, San Francisco, Denver, New Haven, Conn., and Portland, Maine.

(3) Most retailers think prices will remain stable or rise narrowly. As to trade expectations, they range from "hopeful" to highly enthusiastic.

(4) Producers believe their output will be regulated more by materials availability than by effects of the new law. Some manufacturers' price increases appear probable.

(5) Some cattlemen see probability of more production and feeding of livestock; packers approve removal of slaughter quotas.

Most optimistic about effects of the new credit rules are a Denver appliance retailer who says "this reopens the mass market," and a main refrigerator dealer who says "I expect to double my business."

"Too early to tell" is the reaction of most retailers queried, however.

Plan Heavier Advertising

Many of them, and many manufacturers also, plan advertising to inform customers they now can take longer to pay.

Where sales are lagging, there was general reluctance to estimate whether this was before of irnorance of new credit rules or resistance to current price levels.

Retailers in many sections of the country have been holding clearance sales of merchandise on which stocks are high. And some report good response to lowered price tags, even without the credit relatxation.

New York city's biggest appliance realer reports business in "white goods" such as refrigerators and ranges has been "very good." The advertising manager of this chain says prices are the lowest in a long time.

Distributors and dealers in television sets were hopeful that easier credit, long sought by set manufacturers, would help them whittle down a natoinal inventory of unsold sets estimated as high as 2,000,000 units (compared with 13,000,000 in use). Sales in the TV field have been in a slump since last March.

Hopes of automobile dealers for increased sales rest not only on the easier credit terms, but also on the possibility of higher prices.

Most car manufacturers have been presenting cost data to the Office of Price Stabilization, lending support to talk they may seek authority to raise prices as much as 10 per cent.

Two big auto firms already have taken such action. They are the Ford Motor Company and the Chrysler Corporation.

Ford and Chrysler made their formal applications to the O.P.S. late Friday, seeking increases ranging from 9.18 per cent to 10.34 per cent under the new control law.

The O.P.S. said it was taking the Ford and Chrysler applications "under study."

Try To Beat Increase

Talk of applications for price increases is frankly counted on by many car dealers to bring a surge of buying to beat the increases, buying that would clean out existing inventories. Some see probable shortages by the year's end.

Although dealers generally had hoped the credit extension would set the payment period at 21 months or more instead of 18, Ralph Horgan, chairman of the New York district Ford Dealer's Association, said "we feel it will definitely help our sales."

Its benefit in reducing monthly payments, however, could be wiped out by any price increase. Authoritative industry sources at Detroit said that the expected boost in excise taxes on new cars would mean that under the new credit terms, without any price advance, the reduction in monthly payments on the average new car sale would be only about $7.

In the livestock industry there were predictions of "more meat for the consumer" with only minor price changes.

The American Meat Institute withheld immediate comment on the new law.

But J. Edgar Dick, secretary of the California Cattlemen's Association, said the bill "has restored the confidence of cattlemen and feeders in the cattle industry." and Cliff Caney, president of the Livestock Exchange at Kansas City said "Congress did a fine thing for the cattleman and consumer as well."

Here are some highlights of the A.P. survey:

Dallas, Texas—W. E. Laswell, Texas distributor of major appliances, said retailers handling his line did as much business in the two days after the act was signed as they did in the previous two weeks.

Kansas City, Mo.—D. V. Williams, vice president Kelly Williams, Ford dealer, said sales of new and used cars, both retail and wholesale, were up 50 per cent.

Chicago—A. W. Bernsohn, managing director of National Appliance and Radio Dealers Association, said he expected sales will increase and that hardship of payments will be removed from families earning $75 or less a week.

Philadelphia—Lit Brothers, department store, said prices now 6 to 8 per cent above last year probably will hold, although a silght rise, possibly 2 per cent, might come.

San Francisco — Businessmen felt generally prices will not go up. Some said this was due to people holding on to their money; others because supply will keep up with demand.

New Orleans—Most retailers believe further relaxation of controls would be needed. One furniture sales manager said manufacturing costs plus marketing expense have put prices so high even monied people won't buy.

Washington, D. C.—Merchants and Manufacturers Association does not expect any great upturn in buying before fall.

Given Jail Sentence On Vagrancy Charge

Julius Elder, who gave his address as St. Louis, was sentenced to ten days in the city jail, Saturday morning on a charge of vagrancy to which he pleaded guilty. He appeared before Judge Trotter in police court.

Elder was arrested by local police after they had received a call to meet Missouri Pacific passenger train No. 9, west bound, and remove a man from the top of the train. Elder was riding on top of the train when the police found him.

Baseball Probe

Yankee Owner Makes Blast At Chandler

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—(AP)—Del Webb, one of baseball's biggest investors, intimated today that the game wouldn't be under professional scrutiny if its high commissioner had been on his toes.

The co-owner of the New York Yankees, referring to a house judiciary subcommittee's investigation of baseball, told reporters:

"We wouldn't be in this trouble if we'd had the proper kind of commissioner."

Chandler To Testfy Monday

He didn't mention by name the recently deposed czar of the game, A. B. "Happy" Chandler who, incidentially, will be the committee's only witness on Monday.

But he suggested that "the" commissioner should have made a study of organized baseball "like this committee is doing."

And he added:

"When you have a problem like the St. Louis Browns you should do more than sit back and laugh at it."

It was obvious he referred to the financial difficulties the American league team in St. Louis has been having, resulting in the club ownership changing hands four times in 10 years and remaining a box office headache.

But he didn't expand on the "sit back and laugh" reference.

Other Owners At Hearings

Webb attended the committee's hearings faithfully, huddling frequently with fellow owners Bob Carpenter of the Philadelphia Phillies and Clark Griffith of the Washington Nats.

He listened intently to the testimony of Ford Frick, National league president, and George Trautman, minor league boss—both potential candidate for commissioner.

His reaction?

Lauds Baseball's Spokesman

"They (the committee) asked for facts and we're giving them facts."

He admired the defense which baseball's spokesman offered for the reserve clause. Under this clause players' contracts can be bought, sold, traded or disposed of otherwise.

" I don't know why all the fuss is raised about the reserve clause," he said, reiterating the views of Frick and Trautman that it is necessary to baseball's life.

Sues For Damages Over An Accident

A damage suit was filed in the Circuit clerk's office Saturday afternoon by E. E. Gregory against Eugenia Arnold for $5,400.

The plaintiff alleges that he and the defendant were involved in a collision on January 6, 1951 and that it was caused by the negligence of the defendant. He claims he received injuries in the accident.

Therefore for compensation for injuries received and for damages to the automobile in the collision he asks $5,400.

Attorney for the plaintiff is Robert L. Wesner.

Visitors At LaMonte

Visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hintz of LaMonte are Dr. August Hintz and family of Sioux Falls, South Dakota and their daughter Mrs. Guy Libby and Mr. Libby of Hannibal.

Annual Homan Reunion Sunday, August 12

The annual Homan re-union will be held at Liberty Park, August 12, 1951. All relations of the Homan's are welcome to attend.

There will be a basket dinner at noon and a program in the afternoon.

Forfeit Overtime Parking Bonds

Thirteen overtime parkers failed to appear in police court, Saturday morning, and their cash bonds of $1.00 each were ordered forfeited by Judge Jerry Trotter.

All-American Lead Grabbed By Middlecoff

CHICAGO, Aug. 4—(AP)—Bullseye approaching gave high-strung Cary Middlecoff of Memphis a scorching 66 today for 10-under-par 206 and a three-stroke lead after 54 holes in the $15,000 Tam O'Shanter All-American pro golf tournament.

Scores Six Birdies

The 1949 national open champion, and fifth leading money winner this season with $10,561, canned four birdies with putts of less than eight feet in coupoing 34-32 against the 6,915-yard 36-36 par layout.

Two other birdies were bagged on putts of 25 and 45 feet. Middlecoff never went over par in gaining strokes over the field of 120 sharpshooters to move ahead for the $2,250 top prize to be awarded after tomorrow's windup.

Three swings behind him at 209 came steady Ted Kroll of New Hartford, N. Y., who was out in 37 then blasted 33 for a 70 third round effort.

Hawkins Has A 210 Total

Another young pro, Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., booked 71 for 210, while four others were grouped at 211—Ralph Blomquist, Glendale Calif., with 68; Skee Riegel, Tulsa, Okla., 70; Tommy Bolt, Durham, N. C., 71 and Al Besselink, Mt. Clemmens, Mich., 72.

At 212 was Norm Von Nida of Sydney, Australia, who topped the foreign delegation with a methodical 34-35—69. Matching his 69, but bracketed at 215 with police-protected Lloyd Mangrum, was Mario Gonzales of Rio De Janerio.

Demaret, Worshain Tied

At 213 were Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif., with 72, and Lew Worsham, Oakmont, Pa., 74. Then came a quartet at 214—Shelley Mayfield, Cederhurst, Long Island; Jack Burke, Houston, Tex.; Jim Ferrier, San Francisco, and John Barnum of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Barnum, the unheralded 220-pounder who led through 36 holes slipped to a pair of 38's for 76 today in the milling throng of nearly 10,000 spectators.

Bobby Locke, the defending All-American champion, continued in his slump and authored a 77 for 220. This was only for strokes off a qualifying dealline of 224 that determined 69 players out of the original field of 120 for tomorrow's finish.

Snead Barely Made It

Sam Snead, a pre-tourney favorite, also barely got under the wire with a 73 for 222. None of golf's big-name players failed to qualify.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo continued his wide lead in the All-American amateur section of the jamboree. The millionaire's son carved a straight par 72 for a 54-hole tally of 211—five under regulation—virtually to cinch his fourth consecutive Simon-pure title at Tam.

One of the best rounds of the day, however, was fashioned by Babe Zaharias. She carded a record-breaking last nine of 33 for a 71, five under women's par, to wheel into a 10-stroke margin with 223 in the All-American women's open. She was five-under par for the distance.

Her nearest rival was Betsy Rawls, Austin, Tex., with 77 for 233 in the chase for the $1,000 top pursse.

Selkens Show Two Champions

In the cattle show held Wednesday night at the 85th Moniteau County Fair at California, nearly 200 head of stock were shown under the floodlights before Judge Noel Hall of Ashburn, Mo.

Seluhm Fobes Truine, an aged Holstein bull, shown by Ernest Selken of Smithton was named champion of all ages and breeds for the grand sweepstakes award in the bull section. The Selkens also repeated in the cow division, when a mature Holstein cow, Seliuhm Piebe Fobes Queen, was also champion female over all ages and breeds and winner of the sweepstakes.

Both animals had previously been top winners at the American Royal Dairy show in the spring.

Sewing Machine Truck Stolen

The 1950 Chevrolet panel truck of the Singer Sewing Machine Co., stolen from in front of 215 West 16th sometime late Friday night, or early Saturday morning, was recovered about 7:30 a. m. four miles west of Sedalia on the 16th street road.

The car had been driven into a lane on a farm where the thieves endeavored to pry open the rear door compartment where several sewing machines were. It was evident the thief or thieves were frightened away as entrance to the truck was not gained. The doors had been badly jammed by the thief or thieves.

A report was made to State Trooper Pete Stohr the car was parked in the lane and he conducted an investigation.

'Safety' Topic At Club Meet

Safety was the main theme for the August meeting of the Bowling Green home extension club which met at the home of Flossie Ferguson and Mrs. Roy Spears, Thursday, August 2. Mrs. Ollie Lotspeich was assisting hostess. Mrs. W. J. Harrington presented the topic and gave some "Do's" and some "Don'ts". Some things to do were: keep toys off the floor, light stairways, keep flues in good repair, return needles and sharp instruments to box, have bedside lamp etc. Some "Do Nots" were: do not use rickety furniture, do not have slippery floors, or rugs, do not leave paint buckets around, do not leave doors a jar to run against. Farmers should be especially watchful for dangers as more accidents occur on farms than any-where else.

Songs at the meeting were "God Save the State" and "Beautiful Dreamer". Roll call was responded to by telling how you got a child to do something it did not want to do.

Mrs. Iva Yeager was elected to act as assistant secretary. Donations were given to Mrs. Mary Stephens for the Red Cross. She will continue to receive donations as much will still be needed for flood relief.

Visitors were Mrs. Grant Potter and Mrs. Jack Kellerman both of Beaman. The September meeting will be with Mrs. George N. Holman with Mrs. Gardner assisting.

The hostess received many nice gifts.

June Debits Exceed Those of Year Ago

During June, debits to deposit accounts at banks in Sedalia aggregated $10,430,000, and were 3 per cent more than those for the same month last year. These debit figures represent for the most part checks against depositor's accounts in payment of goods, services, and debts, and are considered a good indicator of general business activity.

Red Cross Corner

In order to make our quota recently assigned us by the area office, for flood relief, we need more contributions. The response has been generous, and we are grateful, but we must have more money in order to make the grade. Bring or mail your share in this most worthy of causes to the Red Cross office, 112 West Fourth.

Two old adages, "Like mother, like son," and "What's bred in the bone," come to mind as we learn that Robert V. Wright, son of Mrs. Albert Wright, has made application to attend the Aquatic School at Kaiser, Mo. for the late summer session, August 19-29. A life guard at the Liberty park pool this summer, Bob is anxious to achieve higher standards, and is even going to pay his own expenses in order to do so. When we look back on the record of his mother, this is not surprising, but it is none the less gratifying. Apparently, Red Cross work gets in the blood and stays there.

In spite of the fact that last Thursday was one of the hottest days on record our faithful volunteers west to Jefferson City for their usual stint at the state prison, and apparently felt none the worse for it. Those assisting in the collection of blood were: Mrs. F. I. Lawrence, R.N.; Mrs. David Sneathen, nurse; Mrs. George Chambers, Miss Rosalie Mountjoy, Mrs. A. A. Studebaker, Nurse's Aides.

The following Red Cross volunteers have been on duty the past week at various stations, and all report success in the recruitment of blood donors:

Fox Theatre: Gray Ladies—Mrs. A. A. Ferguson, chairman; Mrs. Earl Gold, co-chairman; Mrs. John Erickson, Mrs. J. E. Norlin, Miss Gene Sullivan, Mrs. Ed Hoffman, Mrs. Harley Vaughan.

Court House: Staff Aides—Mrs. Georgia Holbrook.

Uptown Theatre: Staff Aides—Mrs. Georgia Holbrook, Mrs. A. A. Studebaker.

Penney's: Staff Aides—Mrs. Sid Condict.

Rosenthal's: Motor Service—Mrs. C. A. Wright, chairman; Mrs. C. W. Mathieson, Mrs. E. F. Strickler, Mrs. Herbert Seifert.

Town and Country: Mrs. Harold Dean, Mrs. C. A. Wright.

Pittsburg-Corning: Mrs. C. A. Mathieson, Mrs. Virginia Flower, Mrs. E. F. Hausam.

These volunteers are doing a splendid job of recruiting blood donors, and the chapter is fully cognizant of the time and effort put into it. We must have blood for the armed forces, and the fact that this blood will be used for the servicemen in Korea makes it doubly important that our quota of 400 pints be filled. If you have not already registered and wish to do so, please call the Red Cross office, 618.

Flood Control In Missouri Again Advanced In Projects

By Larry Hall

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 4—(AP)—The downstream state of Missouri has been a problem child for Missouri basin flood control planners.

That's partly because it is a downstream state and one with a great variety of interests. And maybe that symbol of the Missouri mule has something to do with it, too.

Except for levees on the main stem of the big muddy, there has been little actual flood control contsruction in the lower end of the Missouri basin, funneling down across the state from the northwest.

But there are big plans on paper and they have come to the front again in the wake of the flood of 1951.

One of these plans set broad precedents that have since been tried in other parts of the basin That was in the watershed of the river with two names—the Marajs Des Cygnes in Kansas, which becomes the Osage in Missouri.

The state of Missouri objected vigorously to original army engineer plans for dams on the Osage. So Gov. Phil M. Donnelly and Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick got together and decided to try a fresh approach. Pick was then division engineer for the army engineers at Omaha and co-author of the Pick-Sloan plan for basin development.

Fifteen federal and state agencies polled their resources. They scurried over the 15,000 square miles of the whole Osage basin in the two states. And in record time they came up with a report recommending a plan of development coordinating flood control, soil conservation, power development, recreation and all the other factors involved.

General Pick said nothing like it had ever been done before. The survey was widely applauded as an outstanding example of federal-state cooperation.

Dams Recommended

And it's still on paper. Five dams in Kansas, four in Missouri, plus related work were recommended to Congress last year. Congress has not acted.

Here are the major projects planned for Kansas:

Melvern reservoir on the Marais Des Cygnes near Melvern, estimated cost $15,600,000.

Pomona reservoir on Hundred and Ten Mile creek near Pomona, $10,890,000.

Garnett reservoir on Pottawatomie creek, $11,838,000.

Hillsdale reservoir on Big Bull creek near Paola, $7,110,000.

Fort Scott reservoir on the Marmaton river, $12,810,00.

Local flood protection works at Ottawa $1,380,000 and at Osawatomie $545,000.

Reservoir Authorized

In Missouri one of the four proposed reservoirs has been authorized—the Pomme De Terre on the Pomme De Terre river three miles south of Hermitage. That's because this side was taken over in the revised federal-state study.

It's a $20,000,000 project for both flood control and a 7,000 kilowatt-power plant.

The others are:

Kasinger Bluff on the Osage about 10 miles upstream from Warsaw, $85,800,000. At full pool this big reservoir would cover 164,000 acres.

Stockton, on the Sac river about two miles east of Stockton, $32,500,000. A 23,000 acre lake at full capacity.

Hackleman Corner on Cedar creek, ten miles above the mouth in Cedar county, $12,900,000.

The same federal-state pattern of restudy is being tried on the Grand river of northwestern Missouri. Once again Missouri objected to army engineers' original plan for the big dams—Pattonsburg and Hickory. So the whole area was resurveyed.

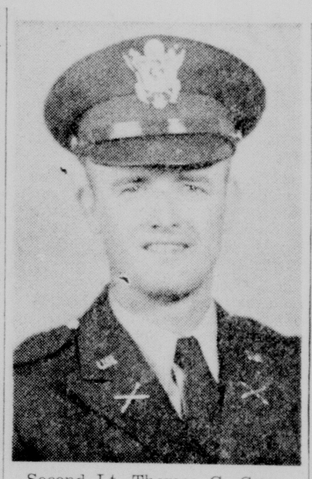
Nothing has come of it so far. The final report has been bottled up for months without receiving final approval.

How about the plans for the levees at the two Kansas Cities? They took the brunt of the destructive Kaw flood in their rich industrial sections.

A $50,000,000 levee project is underway there and it's about 60 per cent complete.

Most of the levees were topped in the record surge of July, 1951. Residents of the area hope they never will be again.

That's why they're beating the drums now to complete the whole array of projects planned for the Missouri basin. We'll hear more about that in the months to come.



Second Lt. Thomas G. Cave, who recently graduated from Officers Candidate school at Forth Riley, Kas. Prior to attending O.C.S. he was stationed at Fort Bliss, Tex., where he was an instructor in the artillery school. During World War II he spent 3½ years in the U.S. Navy.

After spending a 15-day furlough at home he will report to Aberdeen, Md. for training in the Ordinance division and will be accompanied by his wife and daughter, Connie Lou, 1606 West Ninth.

● SUMMER WEAR IS HARD ON CLOTHES

Dust and perspiration soon take all the life out of your light summer garments. In the extreme heat, they soon wilt and lose their shape and press. Frequent dry cleaning makes your clothes clean and fresh, and adds to their life by removing gritty particles and acid damage that is present in perspiration.

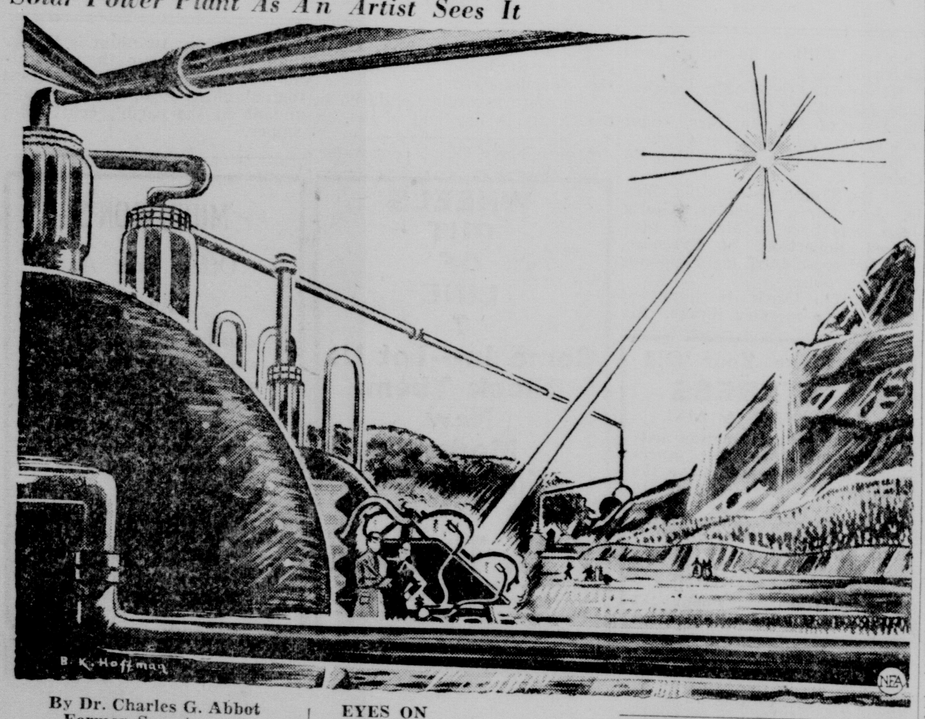
Solar Energy Expert Says It's Possible to Get 20 Times Today's Power Needs From the Sun

Solar Power Plant As An Artist Sees It



By Dr. Charles G. Abbot
Former Secretary of Smithsonian Institution
(Written For NEA Service)

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — With two devices I have patented for capturing solar energy from the sun, it is now possible and practical to produce from this source 20 times as much power as is now used for all purposes in the United States, including heating, lighting, transportation and manufacturing.

One of the devices, a rectangular mirror arrangement, is easy to construct. But if and when mass production should be applied to the patent involving a circular mirror which captures heat from the sun more efficiently, it would be the most desirable device to use.

If the heat captured by the rectangular mirror arrangement could be put into the most mechanically efficient steam engines we have today, we could convert 15 per cent of the solar energy intercepted into mechanical work. The circular mirror could change 25 per cent of the sun's energy captured into mechanical work.

The southwest part of the United States has from 70 to 80 per cent cloudless sky. The average intensity of the energy of sun rays in the clear sky in this region is about 1.4 calorie per square centimeter per minute, which is equivalent to 1.15 horsepower per square yard, or nearly a million horsepower per square mile.

This natural phenomenon, combined with the efficiencies with which my mirror arrangements can turn the sun's rays into usable energy, can produce 20 times more power than is used in the U. S. if one-tenth of the desert area of four southwest states is put to such use.

The cost of solar power comprises a return on the investment for machines and the cost of supervision and maintenance. The solar boiler, compared to an automobile or a sewing machine, or a typewriter or a computing machine, is far more simple, and if built wholesale could be very cheap.

Little expense for supervision would be required, for the apparatus moves automatically to follow the sun. Maintenance also would be relatively inexpensive. It is impossible to estimate with certainty on these things until fairly large solar boilers have been built and tested.

However, I believe the cost of solar power in California, for example, would be less than the cost of coal power at the mines.

Power is now approaching a bottleneck in the U. S. At present a considerable supply of oil for power is imported, and subject to interruption by submarines in war. A power source in the desert would be immune to ships and, covering a wide are, would be a difficult bomb target.

The solar energy is produced in the sun by atomic processes which, so far, have not been available on earth. The fission atomic energy production is costly and dangerous. It seems a pity not to avail ourselves of the enormous quantities of atomically produced energy furnished freely by the sun, without the dangers attending terrestrial atomic sources.

There are three main practical problems involved in this idea: night and in cloudy weather.

Forst, the sun is obscured at Nevertheless, continuous power availability may be had by (a) storing heat in water at high temperatures; (b) storing electricity in storage batteries; (c) by electrolyzing water, storing the hydrogen, and burning it as power is needed.

Second, power can hardly be efficiently distributed by electricity more than 500 miles. Solar power would, of course, be produced also in other states where cloudiness is not excessive. And the regions where solar power becomes available would become attractive and cause a shift of some U. S. industry

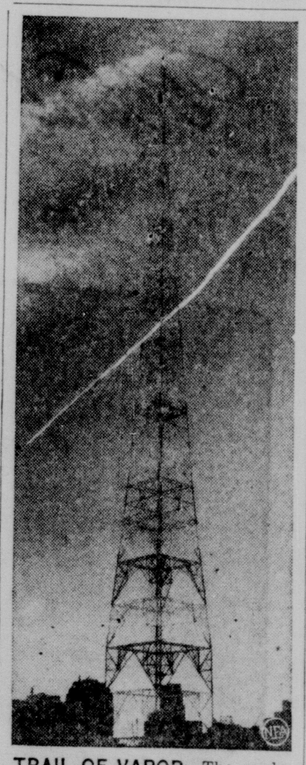
Third, large mirrors would present their surfaces to winds. This limitation would perhaps hold solar power units to not more than 50 horsepower. This would require circular mirrors of a diameter approaching 50 feet. Many units could, however, be combined.

There is nothing fantastic about this idea. It is a practical source of new power for America's increasing need for power.

EYES ON THE SUN

Charles Greeley Abbot has been working on solar radiation most of his life and is internationally known for his work in that field and as a weather expert. Associated with the Smithsonian Institution since 1895, the 79-year-old astrophysicist has been in semi-retirement as a research associate Smithsonian since 1944.

A bill to appropriate $100,000 for practical tests of Dr. Abbot's solar energy devices is now in the House Appropriations committee.



TRAIL OF VAPOR—The angle of this photograph makes it appear that the high-flying B-36 cut right through a television tower in the downtown area of Dallas, Tex. Actually the big bomber was high in the air, making a wide vapor trail in the open sky.

Stalin Has His Worries, Too---

BALTIC STATES Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, since forcible incorporation in USSR in 1940, have been rebellious, subject to frequent purges. In past weeks, anti-Moscow riots flared in Lithuania.

POLAND Has one of best organized anti-Russian undergrounds in Europe. Gives Moscow constant trouble. Recently Soviet Deputy Premier Molotov had to be sent in to threaten violent reprisals against resistance and any sign of "Titoism." Eight Polish military officers arrested, charged with plotting against the Red regime.

EAST GERMANY Popular resistance to Red rule reaches new high. Sabotage, anti-Communist demonstrations are rife. Moscow forced to pressure German Communist government to impose stricter control. New purge of German Reds removes some 2300 party leaders as "Trotskyists."

ROMANIA Farmers resist Moscow's demand for more production. Reds station armed guards in fields to oversee harvest.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA also has well-organized anti-Soviet underground. Frequent riots and anti-Red demonstrations. Nearly 80 casualties reported in recent riot at Russian-run uranium mine.

YUGOSLAVIA is no Russian satellite, but the sparkplug of satellite resistance of Kremlin domination. Tito's defiance of Stalin encourages other dissidents. Recently he made fiery speech inviting Poland to join his rebellion against Stalinism.

BULGARIA Angry farmers resist collection of heavy wheat quotas for Russia. In some cases, whole fields have been burned down.

ALBANIA—Anti-Russian guerrillas battle government forces and Russian police in northern mountains.

USSR In Russia itself, grumbling grows as speed-up in arms production cuts down already scarce consumer goods, lowers living standard to near mere subsistence level.

As you can see, above, there's trouble all over the map in the Iron Curtain countries. Discontent, grumbling and even violent resistance to Communist oppression give the masters in the Kremlin plenty of headaches. They're in no danger of a revolutionary overthrow, of course. They still have all the guns. But there's enough serious unrest possibly to make Stalin & Co. do a little rejiggering of their timetable for world conquest.

Hunters in Illinois kill 1,400,000 squirrels a year, about 70 per cent of them being fox squirrels.

Ascalson, ancient Palestine port, shipped onions in Mediterranean trade, giving its name to the scallion.

Heavy rails in railroad tracks are essential for speed with safety. Nearly one-half those now being produced weigh 120 pounds or more per yard.
